Bosox Beat Nats, 6-4, Keep Full Game Lead

By Shirley Povich
Post Reporter

The Red Sox, happily addicted to the habit, stomped down the Nats again last night for the fourteenth successive time, and maintained their newly-won social status as American League leaders by a full-game margin.

High-balling toward the pennant with 11 victories in a row, the Boston Club was forced, however, to sweat it out a bit before flattening the Nats, 6-4, before 9,564 fans.

Treating the last-place Nats like extraneous matter to be flicked from their own fancy lapel, the Red Sox blithely collected a 6-0 lead for themselves early in the evening.

And then they needed most of those six runs, plus some excellent relief pitching from former Nat Walter Masterson, to stave off the impudent Washingtonians, who actually put the tying runs on base with none out in the eighth.

The Red Sox took the field with the embattled Yankees still looking down their throats, for the scoreboard showed that up New York way earlier in the day the Yanks had whipped the Athletics to cut Boston's lead to a half game.

They were not quite awed by the presence on the pitching mound of Paul Calvert for Washington, however. Calvert took into the game with him a personal 13-game losing streak, and it was off him the Sox gathered all six of their runs, inside of six innings.

This had all the tell-tale marks of a soft-touch for the Sox going into the seventh because their own man, Joe Dobson, was unsheathing a very proficient one-hit, no-run pitching job against the Nats.

And then the Nats started getting tough. Stewart walked, Ortiz single and Robinson singled, all with none out. Robinson's blow was a smash off the rightfield wall, but it merely filled the bases when Stewart and Ortiz, in extreme caution, feared Zarilla might make the catch.

Out of that situation the Nats

Yanks Win, 3-1; Cards Lose, 6-4

The New York Yankees downed the Philadelphia Athletics, 3-1, yesterday at Yankee Stadium and remained one game behind the American League leading Boston Red Sox. In the National League, the St Louis Cardinals' lead was cut to one game as the Cards lost, 6-4, to the Pirates in Pittsburgh. The second place Brooklyn Dodgers were idle.

Milford Haven Announces He'll Wed D. C. Divorcee—Here

LORD MILFORD HAVEN

MRS. ROMAINE SIMPSON

They'll wed in Washington, probably in November

London, Sept. 27 (U.P.).—David Michael Mountbatten, the Marquess of Milford Haven, tonight announced he will marry American divorcee Mrs. Romaine Simpson in Washington, D. C., probably in November. He is 30, she 27.

The titled electric-heater salesman, whose name has been linked romantically with Princess Margaret Rose and Sharman Douglas as well as Hollywood and British music hall stars, broke royal precedent by making the announcement in a three-page publicity release.

(Simultaneously, the engagement was announced here by Mrs. Simpson's mother, Mrs. Clark McIlwaine of Washington. See Page B-5.—Editor's note.)

The usual procedure for young British noblemen of Milford Haven's blood would be to use the Buckingham Palace Court Circular in announcing an engagement. He is a great-great-grandson of Queen Victoria and a third cousin of King George VI.

But the announcement was not in the Court Circular and it will also be omitted from Wednesday's Times of London. Such an omis-

Speeding Up Of A-Bombs Is Discussed

By James J. Strebig
Associated Press Reporter

A swift step-up in American production of atomic bombs was discussed last night. Simultaneously, military planners were reported intent on speeding development of an atomic engine for airplanes.

There was also talk of atom-powered missiles, both for defense and offense in the event of war.

Chairman McMahon (D., Conn.) told newsmen the Senate-House Atomic Committee may discuss the question of expanding American A-bomb production with members of the Atomic Energy Commission today.

McMahon said Russia's advances in the atomic field may also lead to requests that Congress provide more funds for the atomic weapons program.

He noted that Congress has already provided $1,100,000,000 for fiscal 1950, over and above the four billion dollars previously spent in developing the weapon.

McMahon discounted Soviet claims that Russia now has a stockpile of A-bombs.

"I believe they tested a bomb as soon as they had one," he said, alluding to President Truman's announcement last Friday that an atomic blast has recently been detected in the USSR.

Meanwhile, military men said efforts to develop an atom-powered airplane — capable of spanning vast distances at tremendous speed—may be expanded now that it is clear Russia has the bomb.

Some military planners were represented yesterday as feeling that a sure means of delivering the bomb is as necessary as the bomb itself. At the moment, nuclear energy looks like the best answer, despite the difficulty of converting it into a propulsive force.

A program to do that was begun in May, 1946, under the name Nuclear Energy for Propulsion of Aircraft, or NEPA, as an Air Force project. The Fairchild Engine and Airplane Corp., Hagerstown, Md., was made prime contractor. Ten other companies are associated with it, as well as the Navy, Atomic Energy Commission and the National Advisory Committee for Aeronautics.

The project has a staff of several hundred persons at Oak Ridge, Tenn., engaged mostly in developing the atomic engine theory on paper. Public statements have indicated the theory has been pretty well demonstrated. How soon it will be tested depends upon the effort made.

Eyes Dividends

Cripps Raises Profits Tax, Freezes Pay

London, Sept. 27 (AP).—The Labor government raised the tax on business profits and threatened to restrict dividends by law in defending devaluation of the pound at an emergency session of Parliament today.

At the same time it turned thumbs down on fatter wage envelopes to prevent an inflationary cycle arising from cheapening the pound.

Sir Stafford Cripps, Economics Minister and Chancellor of the Exchequer, made these moves in Commons in opening the Cabinet's appeal for a vote of confidence.

But Oliver Stanley, lieutenant of Conservative Leader Winston Churchill, rapped devaluation as "just one more expedient" and cried, "We have no confidence in the government." He said the opposition would challenge the government by seeking to amend the motion of confidence.

Declines Atom Comment

In an aside to the devaluation debate, Prime Minister Attlee rejected a request from Churchill for fuller information on the British, American and Canadian announcement of last Friday that an atomic explosion had been detected in Russia recently. He said any further statement would not be "in the public interest."

Attlee also made no comment on a proposal by Laborite Capt. A. R. Blackburn that the Prime Minister, President Truman and Prime Minister Stalin hold an atomic conference.

The Labor Government went into the special three-day debate on devaluation after a secret caucus of Labor members of Parliament which was reported to show general agreement to support a confidence vote. An informant said there were "no fireworks" at the caucus.

The small Liberal Party, holding 10 Commons seats, announced, however, it would vote against the government.

Profit Tax at 30%

Cripps said the tax on business profits would be boosted from the present 25 percent to 30 percent "as from today." The tax is on distributed profits after an income tax of 45 percent has been paid.

Observers saw the move as a sop to the rank and file of labor, which fears the working man will take the biggest rap from devaluation because it will raise the cost of living.

London stock market prices on industrial and oil shares, anticipating some such action, were depressed even before Cripps spoke.

Cripps further threatened: "If there is any further breaking away

Truman Pay Bill Facing Sharp Cuts

By Robert C. Albright
Post Reporter

Senate Administration leaders yesterday agreed to sharp cuts in President Truman's executive pay bill in the face of a bi-partisan opposition drive.

Leaders not only agreed to a compromise substitute, but dropped their fight on an economy bloc rider directing the President to cut all appropriations 5 to 10 percent.

The bill increasing salaries of key Government officials thus is likely to become the session's first "economy bill" before the Senate gets through with it today.

Cuts Likely to Stick

The economy bloc rider may simply be "taken to conference," which is one way of saying it probably will be eliminated when House and Senate conferees meet to agree on a composite bill.

But the cuts in proposed salary increases in top Government posts are more likely to stick, under a tacit agreement reached yesterday.

The pay compromise bloc is understood to have exacted a promise that Senate conferees will hold out for the lower executive salaries in their bill.

The substitute pay bill, reducing 100 percent increases for some key posts to 50 percent, and setting a $15,000 top for most of these offices, was introduced yesterday by 33 Senators.

An exception is made in the case of a handful of important posts, such as Cabinet officers. Heads of departments would be raised from $15,000 to $22,000, instead of the $25,000 figure proposed by the President for Cabinet office.

One Exception Made

Except for two Administrative assistants to the President at $20,000 each, and three more at $18,000, other proposed increases at the White House and in the Government's top layer would be subject to a strict $15,000 ceiling.

Pointing out that this is the same salary legislators themselves receive, when expense allowances are added to their pay check, one friend of the original bill attributed the cutback to "personal jealousy."

"They don't want to vote for bigger salaries downtown than they are receiving on the Hill," one spokesman said.

"This 'peanut' will be receiving more pay than I'm getting," was a sample informal lobby quote.

Formally, however, the opposition was aimed chiefly at 100 percent increases in the President's bill, doubling the present salaries of some top jobs.

The opposition started rolling about a week ago, collecting 34

2 D. C. Units Ask Bigger Budgets

The Board of Public Welfare wants to increase its 1951 budget by more than four million dollars from current appropriations in the face of mounting economic uncertainty in Washington.

Fears that relief rolls will go up 51 persons per month next year in all categories were expressed yesterday with release of the budget calling for more staff personnel to care for this added burden and relieve already overworked employes.

In addition, the board again asked for a start on its Children Center at Laurel, and a start also on long-awaited construction at the Home for the Aged and Infirm at Blue Plains. The latter plant was the target of Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt's criticism even before Pearl Harbor. (Story on Page 12.)

Highlights of the $7,321,000 District Highways Department budget for next year, also released yesterday, include a request for construction of a new bridge across the Anacostia River near East Capitol st., an underpass on Military rd. at 16th st. nw., and a bridge on Military rd. across Rock Creek.

Armed Forces Pay Raise Goes To President

By John G. Norris
Post Reporter

Legislation raising the pay of the armed forces was finally approved by Congress yesterday and sent to the White House.

President Truman is expected to sign the bill Friday or Saturday and most servicemen will get their first higher pay check at the end of October, officials said. It will be retroactive to October 1.

Speedy Final Action

Final action came sooner than anticipated. Members of the House Armed Services Committee got together yesterday morning and decided to recommend acceptance of the Senate version of the bill without sending it to a joint conference committee for adjustment of differences, as is normal.

The House went along, after Representative Paul Kilday (D., Tex.), author of the bill, said the Senate changes were so minor there were no differences worth sending to conference. On the final voice vote, only Representative Clare Hoffman (R., Mich.) asked to be recorded in opposition.

Two of the Senate amendments, however, carry substantial benefits to the groups affected.

One gives all generals and admirals $50 more a month in base pay than was voted originally by the House. Those of the top brass drawing extra compensation for flying, however, will not benefit, for the boost is offset by a cut from $210 to $150 per month in generals' and admirals' flight pay.

Aids Reservists

The other gives reservists retired for physical disability the same hospital, commissary and post exchange benefits as retired regulars. Thousands of retired wartime officers of the Army and Air Force may now apply to Army and Navy hospitals for treatment instead of to the Veterans Administration—a privilege already enjoyed by Navy reservists retired for disability.

Another Senate amendment accepted in the final version puts

Tally Is 322 to 2; 15,000 Here Would Benefit; Measure Now Goes to Senate

By Jerry Kluttz
Post Reporter

The House yesterday passed and sent to the Senate the Miller bill to raise salaries and to give other benefits to the 500,000 postal workers. The vote was 332 to 2. The two members to oppose it were Representatives Hoffman (R., Mich.) and Wheeler (D., Ga.).

More than 15,000 postal workers in the Washington area would benefit by the bill which may be debated today in the Senate. The House today will debate the Murray bill to raise the average salary of the 850,000 classified employes by $113.60. Approval is expected.

The postal pay-reclassification bill would cost an estimated 180 million dollars annually, and Chairman Murray of the House Postoffice and Civil Service Committee said it would increase the postal deficit to about 725 million dollars for next year unless a bill is approved to increase postal rates. The Administration is on record as opposed to the postal wage bill. Reports from the Postoffice Department and the Budget Bureau oppose its enactment into law.

Flat Increase Provided

The measure carries these provisions:

A flat increase of $150 a year for the bulk of the postal workers. Hourly and part-time employes would get an additional 5 cents an hour, and fourth-class postmasters would get a 5 percent increase.

The first two postal classification grades would be abolished. The salaries in those grades for new clerks and carriers are now $2550 and $2650 respectively. With the $150 flat boost, the new starting salary for these and other postal jobs would be $2900 a year.

Representative Rees (R., Kan.) amended this section to make it apply to the 100,000 substitute and temporary employes who are paid hourly rates. The first two grades for these employes also would be abolished.

More Retroactive Raises

Three additional longevity grades of $100 each are provided in the bill. Service rendered before July 1, 1945, could be counted toward the new increases which means several thousand long-time postal workers would get $300 in longevity raises plus the $150 flat.

Chairman Murray had the bill amended to provide a new system of longevity pay raises for postmasters and supervisors which also would be retroactive. These officials would be eligible for new $100 pay boosts at the end of 13, 18 and 25 years of service.

Annual leave would be increased from 15 to 20 days a year, cumulative to 60 days. Sick leave would

Miners Reopen Nonunion Pits Under Guard

Pittsburgh, Sept. 27. (AP)—Nonunion bituminous mines guarded heavily by gun muzzles and State Police went back into production in western Pennsylvania today—openly defying John L. Lewis' United Mine Workers.

The five-county Clearfield area northeast of Pittsburgh took on the semblance of an armed camp. Rifles, shotguns and pistols bristled at pit openings as pickets roamed the countryside. Some roads leading to workings were mined with dynamite.

No Disorders Reported

Mine operators who refused to be identified by name said guards posted back in wooded areas were equipped with detonating equipment which would set off the explosive in event unidentified automobiles tried to enter.

Mine owners vowed:

"We're going to stay in operation from now on unless we're shot out of it."

State Police reinforcements, rushed in after pleas for help to Gov. James H. Duff, swiftly arrested 17 pickets in a drive to ward off violence. No disorders developed.

The region became a powder keg in the nationwide "no pension no work" walkout of Lewis' 480,000 miners. The nine-day-old strike developed from suspension of UMW welfare fund payments because Lewis claims Southern operators shut off 20-cent-a-ton royalty payments in their fight with Lewis over a new contract.

Illinois Mine Closes

As the strike rolled on with no indication of early settlement, these other developments dotted the picture across the country:

1. Sheriff Bryant A. Nelson called for State aid in Utah to prevent possible clashes between strikers and residents of Emery County. Pickets halted travel on every road leading to nonunion mines.

2. A picketed coal mine at Pinckneyville, Ill., closed after disputed reports of violence. Sheriff Tom

U. S. to Back Yugoslavia For Council

By Mac R. Johnson

Lake Success, Sept. 27 (NYHT). The United States will support Yugoslavia's candidacy for a Security Council seat, it was learned today, and with this powerful push toward election, the rebellious former satellite invited the full fury of its former Russian masters by announcing it "deserves to be elected."

It was a defiant gesture against the Soviet Union, which violently disapproves of Yugoslavia's ambitions to sit on the Security Council.

Furthermore, Yugoslavia, assured of the United States vote, now has a strong claim at home that it has American support against the Soviet Union.

With Britain having decided to vote against Yugoslavia, and with the Latin-American delegations unable to agree on a candidate for the Ukraine seat which expires at the end of the year, there was some doubt as to the election outcome.

However, Dr. Ales Bebler, Yugoslav delegate, issued this optimistic statement: "In connection with reports that a large part of

Bill to Liberalize Veteran Benefits Sent to Truman

By the United Press

The Senate last night passed and sent to the White House a bill to liberalize veterans' disability, death and dependency benefits.

The Veterans Administration has estimated the first year cost of the measure at $112,597,300.

The bill provides:

1. Higher benefits for World War I veterans whose disabilities are "presumed" by legal definition to be service-connected. It provides rates equal to those directly service-connected instead of 75 percent as under present law.

2. More liberal payments to veterans eligible for benefits for arrested cases of service-connected tuberculosis.

3. An average increase of 8.7 percent in benefits for various rates of service-connected disability.

4. Higher death benefits for widows with children.

5. Benefits for dependents of veterans whose service-connected disability exceeds 50 percent instead of 60 percent as the law now provides.

Balchen Arrives From Oslo On Flight Interrupted in N. Y.

Col. Bernt Balchen, 49, famed Arctic flyer and aerial rescue expert, landed here at 11:59 last night to finish the second leg of a 4000-mile equilateral triangle flight on top of the world.

He arrived in a four-engine C-54 transport at National Airport with nine other passengers to complete his flight from Stavenger, Norway where he took off at 12:19 a. m. EST yesterday.

The flight had been billed as nonstop, but a fuel shortage forced Balchen to make an unscheduled landing at Mitchell Field, New York.

Colonel Balchen, who taught Admiral Richard E. Byrd about polar aviation, said that his first two legs of flight proved that rescue work and long range cruising techniques are possible on routes heretofore unexplored.

Ten days ago Colonel Balchen, commanding officer of the Tenth Rescue Squadron at Anchorage, Alaska, left that base and flew nonstop across the North Pole to the southern tip of Norway.

"It was strictly a training flight for long range navigation and cruise control in which we learned that a lot of things can be improved upon greatly," he said.

He was accompanied by his commanding officer, Brig. Gen. Carl A. Armstrong, commanding general of the Alaskan Air Command; Col. Eugene O. Strouse, commanding officer of Detachment B, Tenth Rescue Squadron at Fairbanks, Alaska, and Maj. Gene Douglass, executive officer to Colonel Balchen.

There were five pilots aboard.

Truman Calls Fair Deal Foes 160 Years Behind the Times

By Edward T. Folliard
Post Reporter

President Truman said yesterday that those who called his Fair Deal program "alien or dangerous," were 160 years behind the times.

He said the program had come up from the grass roots and was designed to "promote the general welfare," as laid down by the Constitution. It was, he insisted, "as American as the soil we walk on."

Mr. Truman's speech, broadcast from the White House, was aimed primarily at the women of the Nation. The occasion was Democratic Women's Day, sponsored by the Women's Division of the Democratic National Committee.

Listing the Administration's aims in the field of housing, health, education and social security, the President said that his party proposes to see that the Federal Government carries out the general welfare mandate in the Constitution.

"We will do so," he said, "in spite of the outcries of certain people who say there is something alien or dangerous in the idea of a government that works for the welfare of all our citizens.

"Those people are just about 160 years behind the times. They want us to forget the language of the Constitution."

The speech, reminiscent of the late Franklin D. Roosevelt's strictures against the horse-and-buggy mind, was a new but milder installment of Mr. Truman's 1950 campaign against Fair Deal critics

Homes Bear Brunt Of Gas Rate Boost

Offer Awaited

Night Session Fails to Settle Steel Dispute

Pittsburgh, Sept. 27 (AP).—Negotiators trying to head off a Nation-wide steel strike held their first after-dark session tonight but emerged from the meeting as tight-lipped as ever.

They did not comment on speculation that big United States Steel Corp., bellwether of the industry, is ready to make an offer to settle the pension dispute with the powerful CIO United Steelworkers.

"We were working diligently," said John A. Stephens, top spokesman for Big Steel. "We'll be back tomorrow and talk some more."

Philip Murray, president of the Steelworkers, had nothing to say. That was the case, too, after a 2½-hour session earlier in the day.

Possibility of the company making an offer was seen in the fact that Murray waited hours in his office during the afternoon for the company to say when it was ready to resume discussions.

Negotiations between the union and Bethlehem Steel Co. were adjourned until Thursday after a 2½-hour meeting in New York. There was no amplification of the announcement.

If some agreement is not reached by Friday midnight on whether the industry alone should pay for pensions and insurance, the Nation is headed for its first double-barreled coal and steel strike.

About 500,000 members of the steelworkers in steel-producing plants are set to strike at 12:01 a. m. Saturday in support of demands that the steel industry adopt the recommendations of President Truman's fact-finding board.

The board proposed a 10-cent hourly package, including pensions and insurance, with industry picking up the tab.

If the strike comes, it probably will spread to another half-million unionists employed in fabricating plants which use raw steel in making a great variety of finished products.

The Nation's last national steel strike was in 1946 when a two month's work stoppage brought pay increases of 19 cents an hour and raised the average steelworkers' pay to $1.65 an hour.

Some observers think continuance of the steel negotiations is an encouraging sign. They point out that all issues were argued at length before the fact-finding board and that all evidence has long since been laid on the table.

Those sources think that if the bargainers haven't found some hope of agreement, one side or the other would have pulled out of the sessions and laid the blame on its opponents.

By Thomas Winship
Post Reporter

The Washington Gas Light Co. yesterday translated its petition for a 7.36 per cent gas rate boost into pocketbook terms for the average District consumer.

The firm's proposed new rate schedule, if approved by the Public Utilities Commission, would:

1. Increase the minimum monthly bill of individual users 25 cents—from the present 75 cents to $1.

2. Add 34 cents to the average "hot plate" customers' monthly bill.

3. Mean a $1.07-a-month increase for those home owners using gas for heating as well as cooking.

For commercial and industrial users, rate boosts would vary from 25 cents to $4.07 monthly.

The rate schedule was submitted to the PUC late yesterday as 11 days of direct testimony concluded on the company's request for $900,000 in additional operating revenues.

Summarizing oral arguments by the company, PUC staff members and the two intervenors in the case—the District Gas Consumers and Independent Appliance Dealers, and the Bureau of Federal Supply—will be presented at 10 a. m. Thursday.

PUC Chairman James Flanagan indicated another public hearing would be called, probably within the next two weeks, on the rate schedule. Then the PUC must determine exactly how much, if any, additional revenue it will authorize the company to seek through higher rates.

V. A. McElfresh, PUC chief accountant, has already publicly backed the $900,000 figure on which the company has based its new rate schedule, provided the company returns to the so-called modified sliding scale principle of rate-making.

Explanation of the proposed rates further showed that the smaller consumers would foot the largest single portion, or 10.24 percent, of the company's requested $900,000 revenue increase.

The Federal Government, the company's biggest customer, would actually contribute 1.04 percent less under the new schedule than it now does.

Stephen Mason, company rate engineer, explained that the new rates were designed to put the greater proportion of the increase on smaller consumers since higher labor costs, the biggest single cost element, are reflected more in the small bills than in the large ones.

In other words, the bigger the purchase, the smaller the cost of supplying, Mason pointed out.

He estimated that 125,000 of the total 173,039 customers served by the gas company last year were the so-called small "domestic non-heating" consumers.

The new schedule also proposes that a general uniform rate for all customers will supersede the three present separate rates applying to domestic, commercial and wholesale, and apartment house users.

The District of Columbia CIO Industrial Union Council yesterday called on the national CIO to revoke the charter of the United Public Workers and set up a new organizing committee for Government workers.

Ford Ready to Meet Terms Of Steel Panel on Benefits

Detroit, Sept. 27 (AP).—A top Ford Motor Co. official said tonight the company would give its 115,000 workers as much in economic benefits as the presidential fact-finding board recommended for the steel industry—but no more.

Executive Vice President Ernest R. Breech made the comment in a speech at Youngstown, Ohio, while negotiators tried to head off a possible Ford strike a little over 24 hours away.

The steel panel recommended a "package" increase of up to 10 cents an hour in the form of pensions and insurance. It suggested that the employer's cost of any such plan now in effect be deducted from the total.

Breech, second in the company only to Henry Ford, 2d, addressed the Industrial Information Institute, Inc. He described the effects of the steel board's recommendations as "inescapable." Thus, he said, Ford decided to offer the CIO United Mine Workers a pension plan despite "many reservations about the philosophy" behind the finding.

But company heads decided, he added, that "we would under no circumstances enter into an agreement which called for an expenditure on our part of the greater number of net cents per hour than the ceiling set by the fact-finding board."

The maximum recommended by the board would allot the equivalent of 8¾ cents an hour to be paid by Ford for pensions. The equivalent of another 1¼ cents an hour already is being contributed by both company and employe to a voluntary insurance plan in effect at Ford's for the last year.

Breech's speech was Ford's first public admission that it would be willing to go all the way with the fact-finders' recommendations.

He said a "sound and workable" pension plan could not be financed for 6 cents an hour as estimated by the steel board. Therefore, he added, the company decided to assign the full 8¾ cents allowable out of the 10-cent "package" to a sound pension offer.

Tonight was the last full night for talks. The UAW has set a deadline at 12:01 a. m. (EST) Thursday.

A few miles away, strike preparations were in full swing at the River Rouge plant, key unit in the Ford empire.

Pressmen's Union Warned on Berry Claims

J. H. de la Rosa, international president of the AFL Printing Pressmen's Union, yesterday was warned to file big claims against the estate of the late George L. Berry, union chieftain, or face independent court action by locals.

In a letter to the president, the National Policy Committee, composed of members of the Washington local and other locals that have been pressing for an investigation of Berry's financial affairs, declared that unless the international acts by October 3, the committee will begin litigation to protect members' "interests."

The communication to de la Rosa asserted that the lion's share of the Berry estate rightfully belongs to the union. Included are several farms, a bank, a newspaper and the International Playing Card and Label Co.

(Testimony before a House committee recently was to the effect that Berry financed his various enterprises with union funds.)

The ultimatum to the international president followed a move by the international to lift the charters of the Washington and Newark locals on the grounds they had violated the union constitution by previous threat of court action.

Officers of the Washington local were called on by international officers several days ago to show cause why the charter should not be lifted. A hearing was held but no decision has been reached.

The international, it was learned, had made a tentative offer to join with the Washington local in filing claim against the Berry estate, but on terms viewed as "unsatisfactory" by Archie France, chairman of the policy committee.

At a meeting Monday night, James S. Judge, president of the Washington local, declined nomination for another term.

Louis A. Lopez, deposed last week as the international's legislative representative in the fight over the Berry estate, and Raymond Roche were nominated for the office.

Stanley Bradshaw was nominated to oppose Edward Best, incumbent secretary-treasurer. The election is slated for October 24.

Stereotypers End Cincinnati Strike

Cincinnati, Sept. 27 (AP).—The seven-day strike of AFL stereotypers against Cincinnati's three daily newspapers was settled late today.

George H. Bell, Federal conciliator, announced the settlement and said the unionists had accepted the publishers' original offer of a $2-a-week increase to $93.

Betrayal Charged in UEW Vote

By Sam Stavisky
Post Reporter

Right-wingers yesterday charged that the pro-Communist leadership of the 400,000-member CIO United Electrical Workers was reelected to office last week through a betrayal by a bloc of convention delegates.

The anti-Communists, led by CIO Secretary-Treasurer Jim Carey, declared that but for the failure of delegates from nine locals to vote against the left-wing slate, as instructed by their home locals, the right-wingers would have won all three top offices.

The convention, at Cleveland, reelected Albert J. Fitzgerald—who unseated Carey as president in 1941—over Fred Kelley by a vote of 2335 to 1500. Had all delegates voted as instructed, Kelley would have won by 1957 votes to 1878, the right wing insisted yesterday.

The anti-Communists said that, had the delegates voted as instructed, UE Secretary-Treasurer Julius Emspak and Organization Director James Matles also would have been defeated.

"It comes as no surprise that locals which were grossly misrepresented by left-wing delegates at the UE convention are now repudiating those delegates and even suspending them from local membership," Carey said yesterday. "Such democratic rank and file action is clinching proof of what we have contended all along—that the Communist dominated leadership definitely does not represent the membership of our union."

In Lynn, Mass., Local 201, one of UE's largest, voted yesterday to bring charges against President Fitzgerald—who belongs to that local—for failing to vote for his opponent, Kelley, also a member of the local, in accordance with a mandate of the rank and file. Fitzgerald, who was not elected as a delegate by the local but was a convention delegate by virtue of his office as president, voted for himself.

'Point Four' Help Asked of Congress

Defense Stressed

Larger Arms Fund Backed By Conferees

By Alfred Friendly
Post Reporter

The Administration asked Congress yesterday "in the interests of world security as well as world progress" to enact President Truman's "bold new program" of technical assistance.

Acting Secretary of State James E. Webb made the appeal before the House Foreign Affairs Commitee. Several of its Republican members, however, voiced strong doubts on their willingness to act on the measure during this session.

The legislation proposed by Webb would carry out that portion of the President's Point Four Program to extend technical assistance to underdeveloped areas in the world. Webb indicated it called for an American expenditure of $57,000,000 in the first year, of which almost $12,500,000 has previously be requested or provided for. In addition, recipient countries would be expected to put up $28,540,000.

Vastness Worries GOP

Republican Congressmen appeared less worried by the general purpose and the size of the contemplated expenditure—small as appropriations run these days—than by the vastness of the program's concept.

Under questioning, Webb admitted it could run as long as 50 years. It would involve sending American technical experts and equipment to all quarters of the globe and in dozens of different specialized fields, from health to fisheries, from statistics to geodetic surveys.

Representative Eaton (R., N. J.), ranking minority member of the committee, keynoted the doubts on speeding action.

"The program is so tremendous and world-shaking we ought to have lots of time to think it over," he said.

State Department Hopeful

Privately, State Department officials indicated some hope for favorable action by the House this session. But they were worried that the crowded Senate calendar would prevent passage in the Senate.

Webb testified that the program, by improving living standards in underdeveloped areas through technical assistance, would strengthen individual freedoms.

"Democracy is most secure where economic conditions are sound, he said.

Thorp Urges Approval

Following Webb, Assistant Secretary of State Willard L. Sharp told the Congressmen that in exporting American engineering and technical knowledge many goals would be served—those of political stability and peace, of economic improvement for the world and the United States, as well as social and humanitarian purposes.

Representative Vorhys (R., Ohio), declared, however, that the Administration had failed to make a case for needing new legislation. Existing measures, he argued, permitted carrying out the program proposed. He added that the suggested administrative set-up was "the craziest" he had heard of.

But another Republican, Representative Javits (N. Y.) gave the plan its most ringing defense. Reserving his right to criticize details, he declared:

"I consider this the top flight of American foreign policy reasoning. This is the way to fight Communism, not with words but with the greatest economy—by devoting our real resource, brains. It's a real triumph . . . We are the first people who ever led the world who said we're going to make it better, that we're not going to live off it."

By the United Press

House-Senate conferees formally agreed on the $1,314,010,000 foreign arms aid program yesterday, but took the highly unusual step of warning the Atlantic Pact nations to speed up their common defense plans.

The House delegates agreed to the Senate bill earmarking one billion dollars to help rearm the pact nations. But they warned that Americans want a real common defense plan and will not tolerate "futile" spending aimed at strengthening individual nations.

If the democracies lag in their common defense planning, the House conferees said in a statement handed to reporters after the meeting, the military assistance program can only end in "bitter discouragement."

Connally Stresses Action

Chairman Tom Connally (D., Tex.) of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, issued a similar statement on behalf of the Senate conferees. H said the bill should be "yet another demonstration to the world that action as well as words is part of American policy."

The measure now goes back to the House and Senate for final approval. The two chambers are expected to complete action today and send the bill to the White House for President Truman's signature.

In addition to the funds for the Atlantic Pact nations, the measure authorizes $211,370,000 for military aid to Greece and Turkey and $27,640,000 for Iran, Korea and the Philippines.

It also would permit—but not require—the President to spend up to 75 million dollars aiding anti-Communist forces in the "general area" of China. That is the so-called "China compromise" which ended a long Senate wrangle over aid to Nationalist China.

Reaction to Reds

The speedy action on the conference report was Congress' first concrete answer to the announcement that Russia has unlocked the secret of the atom. It was expected to be the first in a series of moves to strengthen the military, economic and political ties between the western democracies.

The House conferees emphasized that the arms program will be a "prudent investment" only if the pact members set up a joint defense.

"If such a development should lag—if its course should be retarded by narrow vision and traditional national ambitions . . . then the high purpose of this legislation and with them the hope for security among the peoples of the North Atlantic may be said to have come to bitter disappointment," they said.

U. N. Given Power

In last-minute changes approved today, the conferees:

1. Erased a provision of the bill which some members feared might give the western European nations the impression that they would share equally in the benefits of the arms program.

2. Agreed to give the United Nations Assembly—or the U. N. Security Council—authority to recommend an end to the program if it found the plan violates the U. N. Charter or is "undesirable."

3. Adopted a House amendment intended to curb the activities of so-called "5-percenters" in connection with the program. It would provide up to three years in prisons and a fine of $10,000 for anyone convicted of accepting a gift, payment or commission in connection with arms purchasing.

Little Rock, Ark., Sept. 27. (AP)—A Confederate veteran flexed his creaky muscles today and took issue with his commanding officer.

"Discontinue our reunions? Why heck no," said W. W. Alexander, 102, of Rock Hill, S. C., one of four aged soldiers able to get here for the fifty-ninth get-together of the Army in Gray.

"I don't know why the papers are saying that the one next year will be the last," Alexander said. "We voted in South Carolina that we would hold reunions as long as there are two men left to meet."

The papers were just quoting James W. Moore, 98, of Selma, Ala., who said earlier that a 1950 reunion in Charleston, S. C. should be the last assembly of the vanishing army. Moore is commander of the United Confederate Veterans.

Besides Moore and Alexander, other veterans of '65 here were James A. Thrasher, 97, of Louin, Miss., and Thomas A. Riddle, 103, of Wichita Falls, Tex.

Tito Expels 9 Hungarian Diplomats

Belgrade, Sept. 27 (AP).—Yugoslavia ordered nine Hungarian diplomats expelled tonight and Premier Marshal Tito accused Russia and her Cominform satellites of "rattling their arms" along the Yugoslav border.

Addressing an audience on the eighth anniversary of the 1941 partisan uprising against the Nazis, Tito said his Cominform enemies are "digging trenches in Hungary and Romania."

But Yugoslavia is not frightened, he declared, and will "permit no one to impose his will on us."

The expulsion of nine employes and officials of the Hungarian legation within 24 hours was ordered after Hungary had taken simjlar action against 10 members of the Yugoslav legation in Budapest.

Tanjug, Yugoslav news agency, said the Hungarian action was being protested and could not be interpreted otherwise than as an intention of Hungary to break off diplomatic relations.

Hungary said she was expelling everybody connected with the Yugoslav legation except the minister, Drujo Jovanovic—who is not in Hungary at present anyway—because she intended to wipe out all possible hotbeds of conspiracy against her government.

The expulsion followed the trial of Laszlo Rajk, former Hungarian Foreign Minister, an dseven associates on charges of abetting a purported Yugoslav scheme to overthrow the Hungarian government. Rajk and two others were sentenced to die.

15,000 Skeletons Found in Dachau Grave

Dachau, German, Sept. 27 (AP). Skeletons of about 15,000 victims of the notorious Dachau concentration camp have been found in an unmarked mass grave discovered here last week, German authorities revealed tonight.

Authorities had estimated last week that about 4000 bodies were jammed in the burial pit.

Three new mass graves near the camp are being opened.

the delegations pronounce themselves in favor of the candidature of Yugoslavia for the Security Council, my opinion is that Yugoslavia deserves to be elected because of its contribution to the victory of the United Nations in World War II. Moreover, the election of Yugoslavia would no doubt be useful in the cause of peace."

Certain Western delegations have felt it would put Premier Marshal Tito on a spot to place Yugoslavia on the Security Council under the Russian guns. However, Yugoslavia settled the matter herself by campaigning for the seat. Yugoslavia's principal reasons were believed to be to demonstrate a clean break from Moscow domination, and to build morale at home by being elected with Western support over Russian opposition.

U. N. Judgment Asked Against China Reds

Lake Success, Sept. 27 (AP).—Nationalist China charged today the Soviet Union is threatening the independence and territory of China and the peace of the whole Orient.

China's chief delegate, T. F. Tsiang, called for a moral judgment by the United Nations Assembly against the Russians.

Tsiang told the Assembly last week the Russians are directing and backing the Chinese Communists.

In the formal complaint lodged today with the General Assembly, Tsiang said Russia had violated a 1945 treaty of friendship and alliance with the Kuomintang government.

The 14-nation steering committee will meet at 2:30 p. m. Wednesday and a battle between Tsiang and Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Y. Vishinsky is assured. The committee must recommend to the 59-nation General Assembly whether to take up the case.

Most of the front-line delegations showed no signs of openly supporting the Nationalist government. Many had hoped the case would not come up. Now that it has, none would predict the result. The only thing they would say is that they are in for a long and tough fight.

Vladimir Clements, Foreign Minister of Czechoslovakia, laughed and told a reporter: "Let everyone read the White Paper (the recent United States State Department paper on the Chinese which criticized the Chiang Kai-shek regime). Then they will find out about China."

Tsiang told a news conference his government wanted the Assembly to take up the case quickly. He refused to say how he would prosecute his charges. He would not say what he wanted the Assembly to do, but he did say the "moral and political judgment of the world is the most important factor at the moment in settling the question of the Far East."

Informed sources said the United States delegation was not told specifically about the Chinese charge before it was filed. Philip C. Jessup, ambassador-at-large and the State Department specialist on the Chinese case, would not disclose American plans.

Chiang Bolsters Troops To Defend Kwangtung

Canton, Sept. 27 (AP).—Fresh Nationalist troops marched into Kukong today to the sound of gunfire outside the Red-threatened rail city 125 miles north of Canton.

Official dispatches said strong reinforcements had reached Kukong to join in the battle for Canton's Kwangtung Province. The Ministry of National Defense reported fighting only 15 miles east of Kukong. It said, however, only small forces were involved and the present Red drive was not a serious threat to Kwangtung.

All sources in this watchful capital declared the government was determined to put up a major fight in Kwangtung; that it would throw everything it has into the defense of Canton.

Russians Agree to Turn Back 30 Lend-Lease Ships to U. S.

Russia agreed yesterday, after four years of prodding, to return soon a batch of ships obtained from the United States under wartime lend-lease.

Soviet Ambassador Alexander S. Panyushkin signed a commitment to turn back 30 vessels by December 1. Included are three icebreakers and 27 frigates, which are small patrol craft.

The action followed several weeks of negotiations and was a new break in the long effort to work out a settlement with Moscow on Russia's over all 11-billion-dollar lend-lease account. Diplomatic officials cautiously said it appeared to increase the chances for an eventual general balancing of wartime accounts with Russia, such as have been reached with Britain, France and other Allies.

The Russians last year returned seven tankers and one dry cargo vessel. This year they returned the former American cruiser Milwaukee, which they obtained in wartime as an advance against warships later surrendered to Russia by Italy as reparations.

They still have 87 American merchant vessels. The ultimate disposition of these is tied up with the negotiations for a general settlement.

The three icebreakers are to be delivered to the American occupation port of Bremerhaven, Germany, and the firgates to Yokosuka, Japan.

The effort to regain the naval craft dates back to the fall of 1945 when the United States asked Moscow, without result, to talk over details. The request was renewed a year later and again submitted in 1947 by Ambassador Walter Bedell Smith. First discussions were held in Washington April 30, 1947.

Nehru's Whirlwind U. S. Tour Has Capital as Major Stop

A whirlwind schedule will take Prime Minister Nehru of India from coast to coast on his long-awaited visit to the United States and Canada next month.

His schedule, as now planned, is so crowded that it will leave him only four days for important political and economic discussions with Administration leaders and officials here.

His Washington welcome, beginning October 11, will include official dinners and receptions, a visit to Mount Vernon and Arlington Cemetery, and a speech at a National Press Club luncheon.

Afterward he will have a week in New York, where he will attend at least two monster public dinners and visit the United Nations. Next he will spend three or four days in Ottawa receiving the official welcome of India's sister-Dominion of Canada, and two days in Chicago.

From the Middle West he intends to fly for a weekend inspection of the Tennessee Valley Authority, and then to San Francisco for three days of public appearances and meetings with prominent private citizens. He plans to be in Vancouver, British Columbia, on November 2 and 3, in Madison, Wisc., on November 4 and 5, and then in New York again before making the long flight home.

Those who have planned the tour are confident that he can stand the strain. He is used to covering India's vast distances by air, and has expressed the wish to see as much of the United States and as many opinion-forming Americans as possible in a four weeks' visit.

The Government here has looked forward for months to welcoming Nehru as a leader of India's independence movement, and now as head of the most important non-Communist government in Asia. Officials had expected to discuss many problems with him, including India's need of dollar loans and technical assistance, the Kashmir dispute with Pakistan, and the inroads of communism south of China.

Paris Cabinet Eyes New Labor Policy

Paris, Sept. 27 (NYHT)—The French cabinet spilt over the question of how to answer the trade unions' ultimatum for higher wages or strikes, met tonight to draft a wage policy that would both appease labor and preserve government unity.

A warning that "insurrectional strikes" are in prospect already has been sounded by the non-Communist trade union, Force Ouvriere. An officer said recently that worker unrest had reached a point where his union would be forced to strike with the Communist-controlled General Confederation of Labor unless workers got satisfaction.

Against this threatening background, there was much talk that Premier Henri Queuille's coalition government might fall under political pressure. But it seemed the government would have at least a breathing spell to seek a compromise.

Parliament must be in session before a cabinet chief can resign. Parliament is not to convene until October 18.

There were serious difficulties inside the cabinet. Finance Minister Maurice Petsche, a Liberal, was maintaining that the present frozen wage would have to be held until the end of the year and concrete results of devaluation became known. But Daniel Mayer, Socialist Minister of Labor, held that labor's short temper required immediate pay compensation, plus a return to collective bargaining, another of the trade union demands.

Socialist and Progressive Catholic (Popular Republican) ministers were in agreement, while Queuille's liberal Radical-Socialists and Petsche constituted the minority.

Bill Would Give Free Entry to Sister Kenny

By the United Press

The Senate yesterday approved a bill to give Sister Elizabeth Kenny, the Australian nurse, unrestricted privileges to enter the United States at any time and as often as she desires.

The bill now goes to the House.

The measure, which would waive for her all the normal entry requirements such as passport visas, was sponsored by Senator Hubert Humphrey (D., Minn.) in recognition of her work against polio.

THE MAN WHO—

Britain Raises Tax on Profits

from the voluntary limitation of dividends I shall consider myself at liberty to introduce legislation to restrict dividends in the next finance bill."

This bill could come at any time.

In the spring of 1948 the government obtained the agreement of business and labor union leaders to freeze dividend and wage levels. But some companies have kicked over the traces as their postwar profits mounted. Some labor elements also have gone on unofficial strikes demanding wage increases.

Food Subsidies the Same

Cripps said also that he does not intend to increase food subsidies. These are intended to keep prices down for consumers.

Throughout his 81-minute speech, the Laborites, who hold 393 out of 640 Commons seats, sat quietly. The vote on confidence is to come Thursday. If the government lost, it would have to quit and resort to a new general election. Its five-year term is up next July.

Going into an explanation of the government's cut of the pound from $4.02 to $2.80 on September 18, Cripps said the action gave Britain a better chance "for a period of time" to work out of her economic difficulties. The aim is to boost exports so that sales abroad will equal or exceed the amount Britain must pay for imports.

In this breathing spell, he said, Britain must hold down wages, prices and profits, and manufacturers and exporters must "increase our productivity, maintain and improve our quality of design and revolutionize our salesmanship."

In deciding to set the value of the pound so low, he added, the cabinet wanted to make it "absolutely plain that this was not a tentative first step, but a final and completed operation."

"It is not a step which can be repeated," he continued. "We must make a success of it now, for failure would be disastrous and would land us in that very mass unemployment and low standard of living we are determined to avoid if we can."

He estimated Britain would have to increase her exports to dollar markets at a maximum of 44 percent to offset the cheaper value of the pound.

He also estimated that the cost-of-living index would not rise more than one point by the end of the year. This index stood at 115 at the end of August. It is based on a figure of 100 in June, 1947.

Tories Seek Amendment

The Conservatives made public tonight the amendment they will offer to the government's motion of confidence. The amendment seeks to separate the issue of devaluation from other questions packaged in the government motion. The amendment "deplores the failure" of the government to maintai the stability of the pound and proposes to support "a sound economic and financial policy which will restore confidence, stimulate production and export and evoke the united national effort on which the maintenance of full employment and the safeguarding of the social services most surely depend."

The government motion not only approves devaluation, but the Washington dollar talks agreement on U. S. aid to British trade. It asks public support of the government and maintenance of social services such as free medical care.

Churchill himself will offer the amendment Wednesday.

Columbia Institution Bill Passes Senate

The Senate yesterday approved a bill to apply the Federal Civil Service Retirement Act to employes of the Columbia Institution for the Deaf.

The measure cleared by unanimous consent after adoption of a clarifying amendment sponsored by Senator John J. Williams (R., Del.). It now goes to the House for review of the amendment. The House has approved other features of the bill.

Controls Held Curbing U. S. Capital Abroad

By The Associated Press

Eugene Holman, president of the Standard Oil Co. of New Jersey, said yesterday that foreign currency controls and nationalism are discouraging private American investment abroad.

The executive made this analysis in a statement prepared for delivery to the investment subcommittee of the joint Congressional Economic Committee. The subcommittee is considering problems facing would-be investors in foreign enterprises.

"As members of an industry that provided four fifths of the private investment made by American interests abroad last year—totaling 1½ billion dollars—we are disturbed by the worsening of the investment climate in many countries," he said.

Holman declared the operation of currency exchange control in certain cases places American companies at a disadvantage compared with foreign companies.

For example, he said, American companies are unable to sell oil for pounds sterling today.

"Some countries, though unable or unwilling to pay dollars for petroleum, would be able and willing to pay American companies in sterling," he continued. "We on our side would be willing to accept sterling payment provided we were able to put these funds to use.

"We do not believe that permitting us to operate in sterling would occasion any important dollar drain on the United Kingdom.

"We hope that the current intergovernmental discussions of financial aspects of oil will establish a basis on which American oil companies can work out with the British government a solution to these problems."

Ex-Atomic Worker Mum on Red Data

Associated Press WIREPHOTO
DR. IRVING D. FOX
Scientist is witness

Former Atomic Researcher Irving David Fox refused to tell Congressional spy hunters yesterday whether he was a Communist when he did wartime work in the University of California radiation laboratory.

The Berkeley laboratory has been named by the House Un-American Affairs Committee, which yesterday reopened its inquiry into alleged Soviet espionage, as the source of a major atomic information leak in 1943.

The leak was blamed on an unidentified "Scientist X." Committee aids said Fox was not "Scientist X." They hinted they may name the mystery man later.

Counsel Frank Tavenner remarked, during Fox's testimony, that the hearings have assumed "extreme importance" because of President Truman's disclosure that Russia has set off an atomic blast.

Fox, now a student and teaching assistant at Berkeley, testified he worked in the radiation laboratory from 1942 to 1945, and again in 1946. The laboratory did part of the work on the atomic bomb.

But on grounds he might incriminate himself, Fox was silent on Tavenner's questions whether he was a member of the Communist party and of a Communist cell in the laboratory. Tavenner said Fox's membership had been "reported" to the committee.

The witness related that he had been warned that the laboratory work was secret, that he was not to give any information to unauthorized persons and not too much even to authorized persons.

"I've never known of any case of espionage in the laboratory," Fox testified.

"There was only one case I suspected. I reported that to the security officer. If I had known of other cases I would have reported that."

The suspected case, he said, involved a young man he had recommended for a job but who persistently asked too many questions.

The "Scientist X" case bobbed up when Representative Francis Case (R., S. Dak.) asked Fox whether he had reported to any authority that "Steve Nelson was in the county." The witness said he didn't, then refused to answer whether he knew Nelson was in Alameda County.

Nelson has been described in an official committee report as an espionage agent who received an important atomic formula in March, 1943, from "Scientist X."

Fox earlier has declined to state whether he was acquainted with Nelson, now an organizer for the Communist Party in Pennsylvania. Today he also used the incrimination grounds to avoid answering whether he knew a long list of other persons as Communists.

He did state that while at the laboratory he knew Joseph Weinberg, David Bohn and Giovanni Rossi—all scientists who have been questioned previously by the committee.

Confirmation Won By Butterworth

By Ferdinand Kuhn
Post Reporter

Republican critics of the Administration's China policies lost a four months' struggle yesterday to prevent W. Walton Butterworth from becoming Assistant Secretary of State in charge of Far Eastern Affairs.

The Senate confirmed Butterworth, a career officer, by an almost straight party vote of 49 to 27. Five Republicans—Senators Aiken (Vt.), Tobey (N. H.), Wiley (Wis.), Cordon (Ore.) and Smith (Me.)—voted with a solid Democratic lineup to confirm him.

His nomination had gone to Capitol Hill last May, and had been held up ever since in the partisan crossfire that followed the Communist victories in China.

The fight against him was led by Senators Bridges (N. H.) and Knowland (Calif.), both of whom insisted they had nothing against him personally.

"I am not condemning Mr. Butterworth as a person but rather as a symbol of a policy which has failed," said Bridges. "He is a symbol of the tragic fall of China.

"Confirmed by the Senate as an Assistant Secretary of State, he can be little else but a symbol of our Government's intention to continue to close its eyes to the darkness which has fallen over the East and from which the clouds of war may fall on us."

Blame for Red Drive

The real impetus to the Communist drive in China, Bridges declared, "has been the persistent refusal of the Department of State and the President to extend effective aid to Free China, especially when Free China was in a position to use such aid to her own advantage and towards the better safety of our own country."

Both Bridges and Knowland complained bitterly that the United States had tried, through Gen. George C. Marshall's mission in 1946, to force the Chiang Kai-shek government into a coalition with the Chinese Communists.

Senator J. William Fulbright (D., Ark.) reported that Butterworth had had no part in making policy toward China in 1946, when he was in administrative charge of the embassy in Nanking, or in the war years, when he was on diplomatic assignments in Lisbon and Madrid.

"Guilt by Association"

Fulbright, a Rhodes scholar at Oxford with Butterworth in 1925, said the campaign against him was "an effort to ascribe guilt by association."

"When you look at his education and experience," said Fulbright, "you cannot find a better qualified career officer in the entire Government."

And Senator Allen J. Ellender (D., La.), from Butterworth's home State, said that "to put the whole responsibility for the China policy on his shoulders is simply to use him as a scapegoat."

Senator Elbert D. Thomas (D., Utah), a member of the Foreign Relations Committee, said he did not know Butterworth before the nomination, but had always found him "capable, willing and understanding" in his appearances before the committee. "Not only was he well informed," said Thomas, himself an expert on Japan, "but his judgment on Far Eastern matters was extremely good. The Secretary of State has made no mistake in promoting him."

Senate Judiciary Committee Plans Closed Quiz of Minton

By The Associated Press

The Senate Judiciary Committee voted 5 to 4 yesterday to ask Judge Sherman Minton to come before the group for private questioning on his nomination to the Supreme Court.

Acting Chairman Kilgore (D., W. Va.) told reporters that Senator Ferguson (R., Mich.) moved to request the appearance of Minton. The motion was seconded by Senator Donnell (R., Mo.).

President Truman nominated Minton to succeed the late Justice Wiley .Rutledge on the Nation's highest tribunal.

Minton, 59, is a judge of the Fifth Circuit Court of Appeals, Chicago. In 1937, as a Senator from Indiana, he was an active fighter for the late President Roosevelt's unsuccessful proposal to add an additional justice to the court for each justice over 70 who did not retire.

Foes of the plan called it an attempt to "pack" a court which had ruled against much Administration legislation.

Ferguson told a reporter he wants to learn Minton's present views on President Roosevelt's 1937 proposal.

"I am told that Judge Minton may have changed his views on that question," Ferguson said. "I want to find out whether he feels that a Supreme Court member should be a judge or a politician.

"In my view, those who wanted to pack the Supreme Court wanted its justices to do the bidding of the politicians."

The committee acted after Senator Jenner (R., Ind.) announced at a public hearing that he is "inclined to favor" confirmation of Minton.

The committee heard Minton endorsed by Senator Lucas of Illinois, the Senate Democratic leader, and others.

Ives, Dulles Oppose Olds' FPC Nomination

By The Associated Press

President Truman's nomination of Leland B. Olds to a third term on the Federal Power Commission came under GOP fire yesterday at a meeting of the Senate Commerce Committee.

Senators Ives and Dulles, New York Republicans, declared their opposition to approval of the appointment. Olds was an official of the New York Power Authority at the time he was first appointed to the Federal office by President Roosevelt.

Adolf A. Berle, jr., former Assistant Secretary of State, was heard as a pro-Olds witness.

"If Leland Olds and men like him did not exist," Berle said, "we should have to invent them to safeguard the American system."

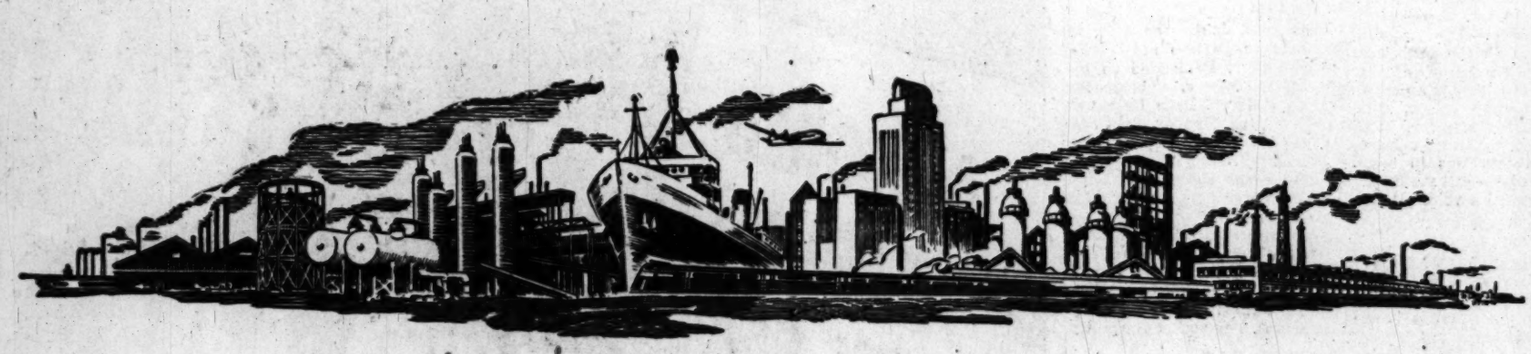
Who's shooting at who

...and who's going to get hit?



WE'VE COME A LONG WAY in this country in the last 50 years. We've cut our work week from 70 to 40 hours. We've developed machines that do 94% of the nation's work. We've multiplied wages to the highest level on earth, and we now employ more people than ever before in our history.

In these 50 years—we've been beating our brains out perfecting the most amazing industrial miracle the world has known—the U. S. Business System.

And now—believe it or not—there is an element in the community in favor of cracking it up and going back where we started from.

The crusade at the moment is aimed at so-called "Big" Business—Business that the people themselves have made big. Up again go the time-worn, leftist-inspired cries of criticism—all the old, hack phrases so familiar to all of us. Strange, isn't it—at a time when U.S. business has been largely responsible for avoiding a politically-predicted depression.

Well—big things make inviting targets for the boys to shoot at. But the question is—do we want Business shot at merely because it's big? And when it is shot at—who gets hit the hardest?

As usual, the truth is in the records. So let's take a look at some facts and figures—and call a spade a spade.

First—just what is Big Business? It isn't Big at all, in the sense that the critics would have you believe. It is actually big management of the affairs and interests of a whale of a lot of good, average Americans.

And nobody—but nobody—except some of our own chronic critics, thinks it is anything but the ablest management this side of heaven.

But let's put the x-ray of fact on a couple of them—these businesses that are labeled crimes because they are big.

The American Telephone & Telegraph Company is owned by 800,000 men and women. More stockholders than employees. They own an average of 30 shares apiece. Working people mostly with average family incomes. Management had better be big—and good—to run the interests of that many people. And when you take pot shots at any business this size—merely because it is big, you're aiming at the welfare of a hell of a lot of this country's fine, average citizens.

Take General Motors—owned by 433,000 men and women. Again, more stockholders than employees. 320,000 own 50 shares or less. More than 140,000 own 10 shares—about $600 in the business.

Who but big, able, alert management could run the complex industrial machine that is General Motors—keep 375,000 people in jobs at high wages and pay a fair rate to the almost half a million people who own the business?

So these businesses are big. So what? There isn't a single community in this country that doesn't share richly in their bigness and the ability of their managements. Together—General Motors, Ford, International Harvester, and Chrysler buy from 49,900 small and medium firms throughout the country. These firms in turn deal with and provide a livelihood for hundreds of thousands of smaller businessmen. Through the automobile business alone, 8,000,000 people have jobs in other industries.

Allow these businesses to be cracked up and you're gambling with a wreckage pile of small business that could bankrupt endless U.S. communities.

If we want to go back to the 70-hour work week, the lower-wage scale, the horse-drawn plow, and the knuckle-skinning washboard—political monkeying with business management is the sure-fire route.

And before we decide that we want business shot at—simply because it is big—let's be sure we know who's going to get hit—and hit the hardest!

* * * *

Dancer to Answer On Reefer Rap Trap

New York, Sept. 27 (U.P.).—Dancer Vicki Evans will appear in the New York district attorney's office Wednesday to answer charges that she helped "frame" the arrest of Actor Robert Mitchum and Starlet Lila Leeds at a Hollywood marijuana party, it was disclosed today.

Martin Benjamin, the 26-year-old blonde's attorney, labeled as "ridiculous" charges made in Hollywood by Miss Leeds that Miss Evans had a hand in engineering the police raid which resulted in 50-day jail terms for Miss Leeds and Mitchum.

Benjamin said the marijuana case had given Miss Evans herself "a hard time." The dancer, extradited from New York to face charges in the same case, demanded a jury trial and was acquitted.

Miss Evans now is awaiting a New York police license to fulfill night club engagements here, Benjamin said. She will be questioned on the frameup charges at the request of Los Angeles authorities.

Asked in Hollywood to comment on Miss Leeds' charges, Mitchum said he doubted he was framed, but he added "everybody knows that the police must have information in order to do their work."

Miss Leeds was one of a parade of witnesses yesterday before Los Angeles investigators checking former Actor's Agent Paul Behrmann's story that gangster Mickey Cohen bossed a prostitution-extortion ring of Hollywood starlets. Cohen denied the charge.

It's No Crime To Tamper With Autos

Offenders caught tampering with autos in Washington since September 1 have had the law on their side, for a change, and have gone unjailed.

The District traffic regulations which went into effect on that date discarded such a charge, and until it is added to the existing regulations, Metropolitan policemen are unable to make arrests on those grounds.

The District Commissioners heard about the problem yesterday from Maj. Robert J. Barrett, Superintendent of Police, who asked that the regulations be amended immediately to restore "tampering with an auto" as a cause for arrest.

Assistant Corporation Counsel Clark F. King first noted the deficiency when he started to charge several men with tampering.

He informed Inspector Arthur E. Miller, head of the Traffic Division, who brought it before Barrett. Miller said yesterday. "As things stand now, if a policeman sees a man with a screwdriver trying to get into a auto or its motor, he can't charge him with anything."

However, if the screwdriver wielder damages the vehicle, then he can be charged with "destroying private property" and locked up, Inspector Miller reminded.

The Commissioners forwarded the problem to Corporation Counsel Vernon E. West.

Rampant Kentucky Bull Gets Into Strange Bed

Louisville, Ky., Sept. 27 (AP).—A 1500-pound bull broke from a truck here today, loped two blocks down Market st. and bolted into a bedroom at the home of Mrs. Leonard Ashcraft.

The bull climbed up on the bed and refused to budge. Finally, police shot the animal.

"I wanted to rent that room," Mrs. Ashcraft said, "but a bull's too reckless."

'Uncle' Piltdown Not an Ancestor of Man

London, Sept. 27 (U.P.).—If you're proud of tracing your ancestry back 500,000 years to the Piltdown Man, it's time to stop bragging.

Dr. Robert Oakley, British anthropologist, reported today the Piltdown Man was almost all ape, "definitely no ancestor of modern man."

He also said the Piltdown race lived about 100,000 years ago, not 500,000 as anthropologists had believed.

"He had an apelike jaw and he definitely was no ancestor of modern man," Oakley, anthropologist in the natural history section of the British Museum, said.

Oakley debunked the accepted theory by testing the fluorine content of the "Piltdown" bones unearthed in a gravel pit in Sussex in 1912.

He said the bones sapped up a certain amount of fluorine from the earth in which they were buried. A test of the fluorine in the Piltdown Man revealed his true age, the 35-year-old Oakley said.

Oakley noted that the South African anthropologist Dr. Robert Broom hopes to prove one day that man dates back almost one million years.

Until then, he indicated, Britons might look for a new name for the Piltdown Man—and also for some new ancestors. Right now, he said, science has no human jaw older than 50,000 years.

the fabulous career of the singer of "Mammy" and "Sonny Boy" was born—beginning when, age 11 or so, he used to sneak away Sabbaths and sing in Kernan's and the Bijou—burlesque houses. Songs like . . .

I'll leave my happy home for you,
For you're the nicest girl I ever knew . . .

All of Jolson's schooling was here—the old Jefferson grade school. He lived on School st. in Southwest. His father and mother are both buried here. His stepmother, Mrs. Ida Yoelson, lives at 1787 Lanier pl. nw. Three half-brothers live here—Emil Jolson, a bookkeeper with the Postoffice Department; Mike Jolson, of the Lanier pl. address, who is a partial invalid, and George Jolson, who operates Jolson's Pharmacy, 3552 East Capitol st. and didn't know his famous brother was in town until he got a phone call yesterday morning and heard a voice all the world knows:

Morphine, Please

"Is this George Jolson? Yes? Will you please send over two pounds of morphine?"

When he was a newsboy here, Jolson remembered, selling papers in the 14th st. and Pennsylvania ave. nw. area. Sometimes to keep warm he would sleep on a street grating directly over the presses of a newspaper plant, while waiting for the papers to roll.

Yesterday, relaxing in a Carlton Hotel suite, with a barber and a manicurist shining him up, he could remark—and not in a tone of bragging—that he paid over a million dolars in taxes last year.

He had many a Washington memory . . .

"I used to visit the Capitol as a kid—mainly to watch the page boys. I used to think if I could only get to be one of them." . . .

In southwest Washington in those days the kids were tough. "We used to carry pieces of iron—yes, sir, I mean iron—on the end of a string just to whop each other over the head.

To the Showers

He played baseball. What position? someone asked. "Pitcher. I pitched three balls—then I became the catcher."

The tactic that got his career off to a start was to sneak over the back fence of the three-room Yoelson home when no one was looking and tail it for the burlesque house. Once, in descent, his foot landed on a broken whisky bottle, and he carries the scar to this day.

Some of Jolson's most lovable stories are about his father, who was a cantor and died here a couple of years ago, age 91. Once, after his success, Jolson sent him a $200 cashmere overcoat.

"I knew he wouldn't wear it if I told him that. So I told him it cost $50. A little later I got a letter telling me to send him six more—he'd sold it for $75."

Jolson's father was always disappointed that his son never got further than being the star in the show. "What," he would explain, "you mean you haven't got to be manager yet?"

On the Lam

From here, Jolson ran away to Baltimore to go into show business full time. He landed on his feet—in St. Mary's, a home for straying children. Babe Ruth was there once, too. Monday night Jolson paid his first visit in 40 years to St. Mary's, sang "Mammy" to a wildly happy audience of boys. "I've been waiting to do this for a long time," he said, "happiest personal appearance I ever made."

"They didn't let us smoke," he remembered about his St. Mary's days, "so I got a plug of tobacco from an iceman and spit in my shirt pocket. The pocket got pretty stiff."

Jolson's age is a favorite subject for his gags. "I'll be 62 next birthday actually," he said. "If you put that, you'll be doing me a favor. They keep saying I'm 63."

He's looking forward to seeing President Truman today. He's known many Presidents.

"Ive had breakfast," he said, "with Coolidge, Harding, Wilson . . . I never knew Lincoln."

'Hearts' Case Likely To Go to Jury Today

Associated Press WIREPHOTOS

Mrs. Dean — Robert

Implicated in slaying

Dover, Del., Sept. 27 (AP).—After more than two weeks of hearing charges, counter-charges and accusations, the jury in the lonely hearts murder case is expected to begin its deliberations Wednesday.

On trial for murder is Robert Brennan, 16, who has pleaded self-defense in the fatal shooting of Wade N. Wooldridge, elderly Virginia carpenter. Charged as an accomplice is Robert's mother, Mrs. Inez Brennan, 46, who met Wooldridge through lonely hearts letters.

Today the State's star witness, Mrs. Dolly Dean, 26-year-old war widow, testified in rebuttal that Robert's self-defense story was false. She testified, previously, that Robert shot Wooldridge in the Brennan barn last October 10, then was ordered by Mrs. Brennan to return to the barn and shoot Wooldridge again, to stop his screaming.

Robert has testified he shot Wooldridge only once after the carpenter "pulled a knife." Robert said Mrs. Dean complained Wooldridge was annoying her and made Robert order Wooldridge off the farm.

Mrs. Dean also branded as a lie Robert's statement that he had sexual relations with her.

The court today denied a defense motion for a directed acquittal of Mrs. Brennan.

Sole Surviving Quadruplet Baby Dies

Chicago, Sept. 27 (U.P.)—The sole surviving quadruplet born to Mrs. Bernice Ecker died today. The mother, who received no prenatal care, died last night.

Mrs. Ecker, 33-year-old wife of a truck driver, was taken to the hospital last night and bore two boys and two girls within 20 minutes.

The first boy was stillborn and the second died early today, 10 hours after birth. The first girl survived, while the second died six minutes after the mother succumbed just before midnight.

The father, Vernon Ecker, 29, said the couple had expected a baby in January, and "had no idea there would be more than one."

Ecker said his wife had planned to start prenatal care next Friday and had made an appointment with a doctor.

Family of 18 Uses Own Bus for Vacation

Troy, N. Y., Sept. 27 (U.P.).—The Bayly family—18 strong—piled into its own bus today and left for a vacation trip to California.

The party consisted of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Bayly, who are taking their first vacation since they were married 20 years ago; their 14 children, and Bayly's parents.

Bayly bought an old school bus for the trip. It seats 14, but he found it could accommodate a few extra passengers by "doubling up" the smaller children.

Jeweler's Friend

Suicide Try Is Charged To Witness

Quebec, Que., Sept. 27 (AP).—Mrs. Arthur Pitre, friend of the Quebec jeweler accused of plotting to kill his wife by blowing up a passenger plane, was charged today with attempted suicide.

She was charged after city and provincial police questioned her for a second time about her part in the plane crash two weeks ago that killed 23 persons.

She had been under surveillance as a material witness since Friday night, when she was discharged from a hospital after an overdose of sleeping tablets.

Royal Canadian Mounted Police said three days ago she had admitted carrying a package to Quebec airport the day the plane crashed. Police believe that package contained a homemade bomb which destroyed the aircraft.

Charged with murdering his wife, Rita, by arranging for the bomb to be placed aboard the plane, is J. Albert Guay, a Quebec jeweler.

Guay appeared in court today and was remanded for preliminary hearing October 4.

Madras Authorities Outlaw India Reds

Madras, India, Sept. 27 (AP).—Madras provincial authorities outlawed the Indian Communist Party today and announced "several hundred" accused Reds had been arrested in southern India.

The provincial government also banned 19 Red-tinged labor unions and four other Madras organizations.

sion is usually considered a "demotion" in British society.

The engagement of Milford Haven to the beautiful brunette, formerly of New York and lately of Washington, has been a subject of speculation ever since their vacation together on the French Riviera this summer. The marquess' mother lives in the south of France.

Visited Lord Louis

Later they flew to Malta to visit Lord Milford Haven's uncle, Admiral Lord Louis Mountbatten, and when they returned Mrs. Simpson checked into a suite at London's swank Claridge's Hotel.

They have been seen often together in London's night spots. Only last Sunday a tabloid treated its readers to the story of "The Second Mrs. Simpson" in a fashion just a little less spectacular than its story of the romance of King Edward VIII and the American divorcee, Mrs. Wallis Simpson, in 1936.

The mimeographed press release devoted more space to Mrs. Simpson's genealogy than to the tall, titled war hero who served as best man when his cousin, Lieut. Philip Mountbatten, was married to his other cousin, Princess Elizabeth.

It traced her lineage back to the British colonists who settled in Virginia and New England and named as her ancestors Richard Derby, clipper fleet owner of Salem, Mass., and Gen. William Clark of the Lewis and Clark expedition.

"During the war, she held a responsible post in the United States State Department and also helped organize several war relief drives," the release said.

Father Killed in Accident

Her father was killed in a railway accident in 1925; her mother then married Robert F. Herrick, jr., and is now Mrs. Clark McIlwaine.

Milford Haven, a prize catch, visited New York twice during the past year to sell his electric heaters and haunt the night clubs of the East Fifties. One trip was during the height of his newspaper romance with Sharman Douglas, daughter of the American Ambassador to Britain.

Besides Sharman and the Princess Margaret, the Marquess also squired the late Carole Landis; American Starlet Peggy Maley, who had a picture of herself taken on the British throne in Parliament; British music hall star Pat Kirkwood, and Mrs. Robin Spencer, beautiful Australian divorcee.

Sharman, who will tour Italy this month with her father, explained weeks ago that she and young Mountbatten were "just friends." Princess Margaret, of course, was issuing no statements.

The American "handout" shocked the conservative London editors who are just recovering from the fact the Earl of Harewood, eleventh in succession to the British throne, will marry a Viennese-born commoner this Thursday.

At Mrs. Simpson's Instance

The handout was prepared by Frank Shaw, who handled Ingrid Bergman's publicity here last summer, and who said Mrs. Simpson asked him to do it because newsmen have been troubling her with telephone calls.

It described her as a divorcee, but it did not mention her first husband, William Simpson, of Locust Valley, Long Island, N. Y., whom she married in New Jersey in 1946 and divorced in Reno in 1948. Simpson married again the same year.

On his trips to New York, Milford Haven received more attention from the press than any titled foreigner since the Duke of Windsor was the Prince of Wales. Now the Marquess also is marrying an American divorcee named Mrs. Simpson. But there the resemblance ends, for he is too far removed from the throne to cause any government crisis over his choice of a mate.

During his stint in the Royal Navy, the Marquess won the Order of the British Empire and the Distinguished Service Cross. He left the navy for civilan life in 1948 and now, among other interests, serves on the boards of Ronson Products, Ltd., and British Sports Arenas, Ltd.

His mother, the marchioness, was the Countess Nadejida Torby before her marriage, youngest duaghter of his imperial highness, the Grand Duke Michael of Russia.

Narcotics Charge Jails Ex-Army Deserter in Italy

Milan, Italy, Sept. 27 (U.P.)—A Milan court today convicted a former American Army deserter identified as Charles Vincent Trupia of New York of a narcotics charge and sentenced him to a year and eight months in prison.

Trupia, described as the transatlantic courier for a New York gang alleged to have smuggled 25 million dollars worth of cocaine into the United States since the war, also was fined 55,000 lire (about $85).

Trupia, convicted on a charge of "clandestine commerce of drugs," was said to have been arrested last June at Rome's Ciampino Airport with 20 pounds of cocaine valued at about $500,000.

Father of 9 Gets Suspended Term

A Sandy Spring father of nine children, arrested for illegal transport of liquor from Washington into Montgomery County, was given a suspended 15-day jail sentence yesterday by Judge William B. Wheeler in Silver Spring Police Court.

In suspending the sentence against Raymond Thomas, Judge Wheeler said he took into consideration the number of his family dependent upon him and the fact that he entered a guilty plea after stating his ignorance of the law.

Zone Action Urged In Prince Georges

In Montgomery

First Fire Marshal Is Chosen

Wallace A. McBain, of Somers Point, N. J., yesterday was named Montgomery County's first fire marshal.

MacBain, 56, retired Philadelphia Fire Department battalion chief, was appointed by County Manager Irving G. McNayr. A committee of county volunteer fire chiefs had recommended him and other one applicant from a field of nine, McNayr said. The Montgomery County Council meeting in Rockville, approved the appointment.

MacBain will assume office on or before October 15 and will receive a salary of $4800.

The new fire marshal retired from the Philadelphia Fire Department in 1941. Since then he has held several fire prevention positions in industry. Recently he was fire protection engineer of District No. 3 of Veterans Hospitals, Supply Depots and Offices in New Jersey, Delaware and Pennsylvania.

He will be responsible for coorrination of all fire prevention activities in the county and will administer the new county fire code, expected to be approved soon.

A report from Capt. Arthur V. Brandt, deputy Silver Spring fire marshal, on fire hazards in Montgomery Blair High School, Silver Spring, was received by the council.

The report cited an "insufficient number of fire extinguishers" and recommended 22 additional extinguishers in the main building and four in the gymnasium. There are now only five in the two places. The report also recommended removal of the fire extinguisher now in the cafeteria kitchen because its contents generate a "deadly phosgene gas" when in contact with hot metal. A different type of extinguisher was suggested.

In other business, the council heard Capt. Joseph B. Nolte, commanding officer of the Silver Spring police station, urge the present practice of using uniformed police station clerks as justices of the peace be discontinued.

Council President Frederic P. Lee recommended the council consider replacing uniformed justices with civilians during its May, 1950, legislative session. He requested County Police Chief Charles M. Orme to work out a plan for implementation of civilians for this purpose.

The Prince Georges County Commissioners were urged yesterday to adopt or reject a master zoning plan proposed for the county by the Maryland National Capital Park and Planning Commission before holding any further zoning hearings.

In a letter to the commissioners, Mrs. Irma Bogdanoff, president of the Prince Georges County League of Women Voters, said the board has approved or disapproved many rezoning applications without notifying the public.

The master zoning plan, she said, in addition to having 15 zoning classifications compared to the present five, would give county residents an accurate picture of zoning regulations.

Mrs. Bogdanoff also protested the non-inclusion of a woman on the recently named four-man county recreation department. She suggested a county woman be named to any vacancy on the board that might occur.

Meeting at the court house in Upper Marlboro, the commissioners also:

Set up a committee to investigate sanitary facilities and license regulations of numerous temporary food stands set up near construction projects in the county.

Asked the Circuit Court judge for a ruling as to whether the county tax collector can collect taxes in special areas such as the Maryland National Capital Park and Planning area, Washington Suburban and Sanitary Commission area and metropolitan county areas.

Took under advisement a request for improving a 1100-foot section of road in Oxon Hill and prohibiting carnivals within a half-mile of the communities of Green Meadows and Brookside Manor.

Approved Whitely's Subdivision near Edmonston rd. as Special Improvement District 45 and received a letter from the Cheverly Citizens Association opposing further apartment building in the county.

Texas, Louisiana Seen Delaying Oil Land Suits

The Government charged yesterday that Texas and Louisiana are trying to delay disposition of Justice Department suits to fix ownership of oil-rich lands off their coasts.

In two motions filed with the clerk of the Supreme Court, Attorney General McGrath and Solicitor General Philip B. Perlman cited various documents presented recently to the court by the two States and said they constitute delaying actions.

The Government motions suggested that in the case of Louisiana the court should give its final judgment immediately.

As to Texas, the Government suggested that its case be set for early argument and a decision on the merits of the Justice Department's suit.

Pumper Study Ordered Here

An experimental program for training firemen in the theory and operation of Fire Department pumpers was yesterday made a permanent, "integral part" of the department's training program by the District Commissioners.

The training school project and an accompanying manual were started by Fire Chief Clement Murphy, now retired, in February, 1947. The plan for the school was drafted by a Pumper School Committee headed by Battalion Chief A. M. Grunwell, department executive officer.

The present fire chief, J. A. Mayhew, informed the Commissioners the school, which has had 322 students, has resulted in "increased efficiency of the operation of our pumpers, more efficient firefighting techniques, a reduction in maintenance cost and finally, increased and enthusiastic interest in hydraulics."

Baptists Voice Disapproval of Racial Bias

Disapproval of any discrimination in education because of race was expressed yesterday by the joint conference committee on public relations of the Baptists of the United States.

At its semiannual meeting at the Baptist Building, 1628 16th st. nw., the committee also restated its approval of use of Federal funds for aid to public schools only, as provided for in legislation introduced by Representative Graham A. Barden, (D., N. C.) which is still in committee after a controversy late in the summer.

The Baptist committee also expressed approval of a recent decision in a New Mexico court case barring a group of nuns and priests from teaching in public schools.

Favor Missions in China

Referring to an appeal from the decision by a group of citizens in the area who have asked the court to prohibit all members of religious orders from teaching, the committee said that "only on legal proof that a person of given religious alignment has been found guilty of teaching his sectarian faith" should anyone be barred from teaching in public schools.

The conference committee, which is composed of representatives of the Northern, Southern, National Baptist, U. S. A. Inc., and National Baptist Conventions of America, also approved a report calling for continuation of missionary work in China as long and wherever it is possible.

"Our primary concern," the group said, "is with Christianity, not politics."

Klan Denounced

In another action, the conference committee adopted a statement of the Social Service Commission of the Southern Baptist Convention denouncing the rise of mob rule and the Klu Klux Klan in the South, and condemned the violence which recently flared at a Peekskill, N. Y., concert by Paul Robeson.

The committee approved the draft covenant of the United Nations Commission on Human Rights and urged the President to grant immediate freedom to imprisoned conscientious objectors.

They called for further consideration of proposed legislation for adoption of a world calendar and urged the United Nations and Congress to delay any action on revision of the calendar.

Catholic Church Accused

In his report to the group, Dr. Joseph M. Dawson, executive director of the conference committee, charged that "a recognized major aim of the Roman Catholic Church today is to capture the United States and to make it the base for the catholization of the world."

The Catholic Church, he said, "seeks to utilize our Government to forward its winning of America and to capitalize on both our Government and resources in the effort to annihilate Russia and the Russian opposition to the Pope.

"Baptists, who by no stretch of the imagination may be charged with condoning communism, cannot on any pretext consent to Catholic changing our Constitution or gaining clerical control of our governmental machinery," Dawson's report declared.

Many Street Repair Jobs Planned in '51

By Sam Zagoria

The District Highways Department will concentrate in fiscal 1951 on liquidating a backlog of street repair projects and taking first steps toward erection of another bridge across the Anacostia River.

This was indicated yesterday in the department's budget request to the District Commissioners, asking $2,321,000 for operating expenses and five million dollars for capital outlay.

The capital outlay program is headed by only one major construction project—the first leg of the proposed East Capitol st. Bridge over the Anacostia. A total of $3,560,000 has been ear-marked for this to cover planning and initial building costs.

The present four major building project—Whitehurst Freeway, East Highway Bridge, South Capitol st. Bridge and the Dupont Circle Underpass—will be completed during the current fiscal year.

The Anacostia Bridge, expected to cost between 6 and 12 million dollars, is tentatively scheduled for a start by January 1, 1951. The project and its location, which is controversial, must first be approved by the Commissioners, the National Capital Park and Planning Commission, the National Park Service and the Bureau of Public Roads.

Deputy Director of Highways Samuel R. Harrison said the job will require about nine months of preliminary work such as checking sub-soil conditions, selecting bridge design and planning approach roadways before the second phase of nine months' actual planning may be started.

The bridge is one of nine projects to be built jointly by the District and Federal governments on a dollar-for-dollar matching basis.

Two other joint structural projects are the Military rd. Underpass at 16th st., estimated at $465,000, and the Military rd. Bridge across Rock Creek, $800,000. These structures are part of the plan for carrying Military rd. across Rock Creek as a modern highway. The roadway will be a future link in the proposed Fort dr.

Other joint projects.

Widening and repaving of Harewood rd., Fort dr. and Claremont from Michigan to Hawaii aves. at a total cost of $270,000. The present narrow macadam roadway will be replaced by a concrete four-lane highway.

Division ave. ne. from East Capitol st. to Sheriff rd. will be given similar treatment at a cost of $225,000, changing a narrow macadam road to a four-lane concrete highway.

New pavement will be placed on Kansas ave. ne. from Madison st. to the District Line, clearing the way for development of a through road into town using the proposed underpass tunneling the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad. The cost will be $205,000.

Ridge rd. se. will be widened in spots and the macadam replaced by concrete from Minnesota ave. to G. st. to erect a four-lane arterial highway into the downtown area. The cost, $190,000.

Winding, macadam-covered Wheeler rd. se. will be replaced by a four-lane concrete roadway from Alabama ave. to Southern ave. at a cost of $200,000. The same treatment will be given to Foxhall rd. nw. from Reservoir rd. to Whitehaven pkwy. at a cost of $85,000.

In recent years the city's cash has gone principally into the Federal aid program, used for completing major construction while such wholly city-financed work as paving, repaving, surfacing, resurfacing and building of street drainage structures has been piling up, Harrison said.

The 1951 program places emphasis on catching up on this work. Street repairs are scheduled for all parts of the city and four of the projects are in the $100,000 class. These are:

Replacing the macdam surface on McKinley st. nw. between Connecticut ave. and 32d st. with concrete, widening the roadway in some places, but not removing any trees. The cost is $92,700.

Removal of streetcar stracks on H st. nw. between North Capitol st. and Massachusetts ave. and replacement of the entire road with concrete. Cost $130,000.

Widening and repaving of deteriorated asphalt on the 11th st. nw. roadway between Vermont and Florida aves. at $132,000. Resurfacing of 7th st. sw. from Independence ave. to Maine ave. using the heater method to cover broken road surfaces. Cost, $105,000.

Financial Problem

The total capital outlay is $185,000 less than the current year's building program, indicating a trend which poses a major financial proble mfor the department.

Acting Engineer Commissioner L. E. Cox said the highway fund provides the cash for operation of the Vehicle and Traffic Department, Trees and Parking agency and up to 15 per cent for those on traffic duty, with the remainder for the Highway Department.

The city may be forced to ask for additional gasoline taxes when the current levy expires to permit essential building programs to go forward, Colonel Cox Said.

In the department's budget estimate, the Police Department is asking for $1,124,000, compared with a current budget of $976,222. Vehicles and Traffic has requested $1,124,000 while the present budget is $929,800. Trees and Parking also asked for $40,000 more.

Another departmental service which will be speeded in the proposed budget is the painting and rehabilitation of existing structures to prevent rust and deterioration. These include the present 14th st. bridge, the 11th st. se. bridge, the Benning rd. ne. viaduct and the Klingle Valley bridge near Connecticut ave. nw., Harrison said.

The department has asked for $20,000 more for snow removal operations to partly pay for two snow heaters for use on the Whitehurst Freeway. These are expected to melt snow on the roadway at the rate of 15 miles an hour. The usual procedure of pushing snow to the roadsides cannot be followed on the Freeway because the highway is over commercial sections. The new type cleaners are being used on airports, the department pointed out.

The personnel force of 151 would be augumented by 14 costing an additional $47,342 a year in salaries, the budget estimate proposes.

Traffic Death Total in Week Near D.C. High

Last week was one of the worst for traffic fatalities in the city's history, although there were 45 fewer accidents than in the previous week.

The police traffic division's weekly statistical report made public yesterday showed 237 accidents last week. Five of them resulted in deaths.

The most dangerous thoroughfares in the city, the report showed, were:

Third st., from E st. sw. to H st. nw.—10 vehicular accidents.

Georgia ave., from W st. nw. to Geranium st. nw.—seven vehicular accidents and one pedestrian accident.

Twelfth st., from C st. sw. to M st. nw.—seven vehicular accidents and one pedestrian accident.

Motorcycle policemen will be assigned to patrol these stretches this week in an effort to reduce the number of accidents.

There were 45 instances of failing to yield the right of way involved in the accidents. In 42 cases, charges of colliding were made, and 28 drivers were charged wiht failing to give full time and attention.

The First Precinct had the most accidents last week, 41, while the Seventh Precinct had the fewest, 4.

There were 34 vehicular accidents, two streetcar accidents and five pedestrian accidents in the First Precinct.

The traffic record for the week of other precincts (with total number of accidents in parentheses and breakdown of vehicular, streetcar and pedestrian accidents in that order) follows:

Second Precinct (24)—20-1-3; Third Precinct (6)—4-1-1; Fourth Precinct (16)—14-0-2; Fifth Precinct (23)—18-1-4; Sixth Precinct (17)—17-0-0; Seventh Precinct (4)—3-0-1; Eighth Precinct (13)—11-1-1; Ninth Precinct (29)—20-1-8; Tenth Precinct (15)—11-1-3; Eleventh Precinct (9)—8-0-1; Twelfth Precinct (10)—8-1-1; Thirteenth Precinct (23)—18-2-3; Fourteenth Precinct (7)—7-0-0.

The total of 237 accidents last week was made up of 193 vehicular accidents, 11 streetcar accidents and 33 pedestrian accidents.

D. C. Experts Discuss Parking

Two Washington traffic experts discussed parking problems yesterday with 400 traffic engineers in convention at the Wardman Park Hotel.

David R. Levin, chief, land studies section, Bureau of Public Roads, told the twentieth annual meeting of the Institute of Traffic Engineers how off-street parking facilities could be created through local zoning ordinances.

John H. Mitton, D. C. Department of Vehicles and Traffic engineer, described 11 years of parking meter operation in Washington and called the meters essential in aiding enforcement and promoting turnover.

Levin said that 185 cities and towns in 29 States and the District now have ordinances which require the provision of parking facilities in connection with various property uses.

"New or substantially altered structures" come under the jurisdiction of such ordinances, Levin said, and owners are required to provide adequate off-street parking facilities required in their use. City authorities become more anxious to legislate off-street parking facilities, Levin said, when confronted with statistics proving that central business district valuations have decreased throughout the country in recent years primarily because of poor parking facilities.

Mitton told the engineers that Washington had bought 1610 additional meters during the fiscal year ending July, 1949, because of the feeling that they had helped relieve traffic parking congestion. The city now uses more than 2100 meters, he said.

Today the convention will close after the engineers make a tour of complex traffic areas in Washington.

Welfare Unit to Ask 18.6 Million Budget

By Dorothea Andrews
Post Reporter

The Board of Public Welfare has drawn up a budget for the 1951 fiscal year which it hopes will be a bulwark against mounting economic uncertainty.

It expects to have more District residents and families on its public assistance rolls. It expects it will have to care for more dependent and needy children. There will be more aged who are unemployable.

And all this adds up to more work for the Department of Public Welfare, already understaffed and overworked.

On the physical, concrete side, the board is still using most of the same outmoded institutions it has had for years. It once more would like to get started on some new structures. Work on these projects was delayed by congressional apathy before the war, building shortages during the war and by economy strictures since the war.

Lumping all these situations together, the Board of Public Welfare is asking the District Commissioners to send Congress an $18,673,020 budget for its 1951 fiscal operations. This is a good four million dollars more than the current appropriation of $14,084,341 under which public welfare in Washington is operating.

Increases are asked in every category of welfare operation.

The Welfare Board's budget request carries a blunt warning on mounting relief rolls in Washington: that the number of persons eligible for tax-supported relief "is increasing in spite of restrictive regulations."

By fiscal 1951, the board expects a 51½ person per month average net increase in the case load the department must carry. There will be a total of 7030 persons receiving general public assistance—1429 more than were in this category during fiscal 1949 and nearly a thousand more than the 6376 case load estimated for the current fiscal year.

The department expects to be aiding 6400 dependent children during fiscal 1951—a drastic jump from June 1941 when there were only 2888 children in this category. In June 1949, there were 5340 children receiving public welfare aid.

The board points out that persons getting welfare grants are faced with a serious problem—increased food and clothing costs, and difficulty in finding shelter "at any price." It wants to restore its budget standard—47½ cents per person per day for food, and from $3 to $5 per person per month for clothing. This standard had to be cut back this year because of insufficient appropriations.

On the staff side, the board asked for 54 additional workers in the public assistance division alone and bluntly stated:

"An overload of work which has no foreseeable termination point results in a pressure on the agency from the outside and from within, which causes the staff to become exhausted, mentally, physically and emotionally."

The board warned that this produces results such as "errors, which in turn require additional work to correct" and reduction of effort made to affect "rehabilitation for the purpose of employment to a bare minimum."

Other staff increases:

Additional nurses, teachers and custodial staff at the Industrial Home School because of the increasing number of referrals of children there by public agencies. The board is opening the Lincoln Building to accommodate 60 of these additional children.

A case worker at the Receiving Home for Children, to help rehabilitate the children sent there by the police, the Juvenile Court and the Child Welfare Division. "Individual treatment can often resolve the cause of the maladjustment and help the child return to the community rather than to some public institution."

Two depressing signs of the times were noted in population increases at the Home for the Aged and Infirm, Blue Plains, and at the District Training School, Laurel, which cares for Washington's feeble-minded.

At Blue Plains, an increasing percentage of new residents are infirm: "Wartime manpower demands have made it possible for some former inmates to maintain themselves in the community. More normal conditions will result in the return of a number of these persons, and an increase in the institution's population at least to the 1943 level." The daily average that year was 491. The 1949 fiscal figure was 464.

At the District Training School, population has increased almost steadily since 1943, when there were 616 under care there. The estimate for the 1951 fiscal year is 750. The 1949 fiscal figure was 651. The institution averages 50 admissions per year "representing the most urgent cases which must be admitted upon commitment by the court."

The board, in making its perennial request for congressional funds to replace outmoded welfare institutions, this year omits "narrative justification" for most of these items. It points out that need for them has been agreed to in principle already.

Largest item on the nearly three million dollars capital outlay agenda is the beginning of work on an infirmary building and separate laundry building at the Home for the Aged and Infirm. The board wants one million dollars to start this project, which it estimates will cost three million dollars to finish.

It also wants $500,000 to start a new heating plant, sewage disposal plant, water supply and distribution system, sewers and electrical distribution system at the District Training School. The request is slightly less than half the estimated $1,240,000 cost of this project.

Wants to Build Kitchen

If the board gets the $187,000 it wants to build a new central kitchen at the Industrial Home School for Colored Boys. It can consolidate the six kitchens now in use for this purpose. The board believes it can give more efficient food service and also dispense with the services of five cooks.

A $150,000 slice of tax money is asked to start building a new Industrial Home School for white children on the site of the District Training School in Laurel. In addition, $200,000 is requested for start of work on a new National Training School for Girls on the Jolly Acres site. The board also wants a new detention dormitory at the District Training School, for which it is asking $250,000 next year toward a total cost of $480,000.

With the start of the new Industrial Home School at Laurel, the Welfare Board hopes to begin its long-awaited Children's Center there. The center would pull into one location all children's institutional services, freeing more valuable District land for other uses.

Here is a summary of departmental budget requests for fiscal year 1951 as compared with current 1950 appropriations:

Item	1950 Appropriation	1951 Request
General administration	$98,316	$106,700
Agency services	3,849,790	5,388,017
Operating expenses, protective institutions	2,338,613	3,052,563

Court's Decision Reserved in Realty Case

In reversing a District Court decision, the Court of Appeals Monday held that a buyer can rescind his contract to purchase property on grounds he was induced to sign by fraudulent, oral statements of a real estate agent.

The Appeals Court sent back to District Court for new trial the suit of Miss Thelma F. Owens, rooming house operator, of 5366 27th st. nw., who maintained that Max C. Schwartz, real estate broker of 6216 Georgia ave. nw., misrepresented the amount of land and falsely asserted he had arranged for a $30,000 loan on the property.

Involved is a house at 3351 Mount Pleasant st. nw., sold by Theodore S. and Grace L. Grape, jewelers, of 2701 Chesapeake st. nw.

Gives While He Lives For Greater Pleasure

Providence, R. I. (U.P.).—A "will" published before he was dead in a newspaper "Letters to the Editor" column was Serop Hagopian's way of singling out novelists, journalists and newspapers that have given him pleasure in recent years.

"As I lie on my deathbed . . ." it commenced, and went on to say that the Armenian baker would like to distribute $1300 "while I am alive to see it."

Hagopian gave $100 each to an Armenian-American novelist, a radio program, a newspaper writer and five Armenian-language newspapers. The rest of the money would be distributed later on, he said.

Along Our Street

with Aunt Penny

On my way home from the stores this afternoon, I stopped near the football field for a few minutes to watch the team practice. They're out almost every afternoon these days. And little as I know about football, I could tell they had learned the secret of teamwork.

The rest of the way home, I thought how important teamwork is—in sports, in clubs, in business—and among neighbors, too. One place where it works wonders is on a telephone party line.

Teamwork on a party line is simply a matter of allowing some time between calls so that others have a chance to use the line . . . not interrupting when the line is in use, except to make an emergency call . . . answering the telephone promptly. When everyone on the line works together, treating his neighbor with courtesy and consideration, it means better telephone service all along the line.

'Give-away' Broadcasts Find Favor With Public, Votes Show

By George Gallup
Director, American Institute of Public Opinion

Princeton, N. J., Sept. 27.—"Give-away" programs on the radio may not be popular with the Federal Communications Commission, but they make a hit with the radio listening audience.

Interviews conducted throughout 48 States with men and women who have listened to give-away programs indicate substantial sentiment for continuing this type of program on the air.

The FCC in August ordered certain types of give-away programs banned from the air October 1. Several broadcasters brought court injunctions against enforcing the order, and the FCC last week announced that the ban would be delayed pending the outcome of court fights.

At the height of the furor caused in the broadcasting industry by the FCC ruling, interviewers for the Institute put a series of questions concerning give-aways to adults:

"How often do you, yourself, listen to radio give-away programs—very often, once in a while, or very seldom?"

Often	22%
Once in a while	29
Very seldom	32
	83%
Never listen	17
	100%

The 83 per cent of the sample who said they listened to give-aways were then asked:

"What do you think of the programs on the whole—do you find them interesting, or not?"

Interesting	53%
Not interesting	25
No opinion	5
All listeners	83%

All persons were then asked:

"Do you think radio give-away programs should be continued—or would you rather see them done away with?"

Continue	50%
Abolish	27
No opinion	23

Whereas persons with grade school or high school education only were in favor of continuing give-aways, those with college training were closely divided in the vote:

	College	High Sch'l	Grade Sch'l
Continue	40%	54%	49%
Abolish	38	24	27
No opinion	22	22	24

Economy Drive Forecast in 1950 By Democrats

By The Associated Press

Democratic congressional leaders indicated Monday that they will make a concerted drive next year to get the Federal treasury out of the red—even if it takes an increase in taxes.

Speaker Rayburn hinted at this possibility after a White House call. He told reporters the House definitely will act, before adjournment of the present session, on legislation expanding the Federal Social Security program. However, the Senate is not expected to act on this bill until 1950.

Rayburn said one reason for seeking House action on Social Security expansion is to clear the track for the House Ways and Means Committee to get down to work early next year on a general revision of tax statutes. The committee handles both social security and tax legislation. Rayburn said the Government "cannot continue deficit financing indefinitely."

FCC Hearing on Color Television Turns Into Dispute Over Omelet

By The Associated Press

Federal Communications Commissioner Robert F. Jones yesterday implied that television manufacturers are less interested in development of color than they claim. This drew a quick and heated protest from industry spokesmen.

Cosgrove

During the brief but biting exchanges, the discussion got around to Jones' ability to make an omelet, an ability which former Senator Burton K. Wheeler, attorney for the Radio Manufacturers Association, questioned.

Wheeler specifically accused the commissioner of being "unfair" in his cross-examination of Raymond C. Cosgrove, the association's president, at FCC hearings on new television channels and possible color operations.

Jones, for more than an hour, had shot questions at the witness intended to establish that the set-makers are pretending an interest which they do not feel in having color introduced into TV programs.

Claims Expert Advice

Cosgrove, whose organization has said that color probably still is "several years" away, insisted he was not himself an engineer but was expressing views as a production specialist, based on expert engineering advice.

"Don't engineers take orders from executives?" Jones asked.

"I sometimes wonder, Mr. Commissioner," Cosgrove replied smiling. When the laughter in the hearing room died away, Jones said sharply:

"You are just the press release man?"

Wheeler was on his feet quickly.

"I must object," he said, "that the cross-examination has been entirely unfair. Mr. Cosgrove is here to give you all the information he has. We have been patient, but you are being unfair."

"You're Not an Engineer Yourself"

Jones retorted:

"You have put your witness in the position in which he finds himself because you have had him testify to matters of which he has no personal knowledge."

"You are not an engineer yourself," Wheeler commented, "but you make commission decisions based on engineering advice."

"I never laid an egg," Jones replied tartly, "But I can make a fine omelet."

"Well," said Wheeler, taking his seat, "I am not so sure of that."

Jones had complained earlier that the manufacturers had apparently come to the hearings with much less specific information on color television prospects than the commission will require to make a decision.

Noting previous industry testimony that there are now nine possible systems, all requiring further tests, Jones said:

"It isn't possible that you have gotten up a lot of paper systems so as to build up straw men to knock them down?"

"I have no knowledge of such a thing," said Cosgrove. "There are some systems which have been included in our study exhibits which are not being sponsored here. However, we have included all our data for the information of the commission. I have no obstructionism of any kind.

Cosgrove testified that what his organization wants is to have the best possible overall television system decided upon with future operations firmly fixed, so the public can buy receiving sets "with the assurance that the system is permanent and that further experimentation will not be done at their expense."

Scared About Converters

"If the uncertanties were wiped out, we would be selling twice as many receiving sets," he said.

"We are scared to death about converters and adapters."

What the manufacturers want, he testified, is the opportunity to deliver "a practical home receiver" capable of sharing in whatever the future operations may be, in order to avoid what he described as "a Christmas tree assembly" of extra gadgets.

Butchered Pay

A wholly deplorable whittling mania has struck the executive pay bill in the Senate. Under the pretense of economy, a powerful faction has laid down a rule that no pay raise shall exceed 50 percent and that, aside from the members of the Cabinet and a few White House aides, executive appointees shall not receive more than $15,000 a year. The effect is to upset the neat balance that had been attained in the House bill (with some few exceptions) as a result of the recommendations of the President and the Hoover Commission.

The Senate compromise would trim members of the Cabinet from the $25,000 allowed in the House bill to $22,500. Undersecretaries and various other high administrative officials would be bounced down from the $20,000 level provided in the House bill to $15,000. This seems particularly harsh because it would reduce men carrying extensive responsibility to the level of the commissioner of public buildings and members of the Indian Claims Commission. In other words, the intermediate bracket of high salaries would be wiped out.

This arbitrary slash can be explained only by pettiness on the part of members of the Senate. Apparently some Senators are not willing to permit Undersecretaries and the heads of administrative agencies to earn more than they do. Such petty jealousies have often interfered with equitable salary adjustments in the past, but we had hoped that, with big government an actuality demanding the best brains that can be hired, legislators would rise above such peanut considerations.

Of course, it does make a bad impression to raise any official's salary more than 50 percent at any one time. But sharp increases were recommended only because top-flight executives' salaries have been stationary for a quarter of a century. Congress was merely asked to make up for its past neglect. It cannot dodge that responsibility by pleading economy, for it is estimated that, considering the increased taxes that these officials would pay, the House bill would cost only about $800,000 a year. For that sum the Government could reasonably expect to buy many million dollars worth of increased efficiency. Before voting on this shabby compromise, we hope the Senate will sharpen its recollection of the age we are living in. If this compromise were to become law, the exodus from the Government service would be sizable, and there would be widespread demoralization. By any test of stewardship this vital subject deserves better treatment.

The Best Defense

Defense Secretary Johnson's praise of the Navy after his trip aboard an aircraft carrier should help to remove any residual fears that he is participating in some deep-dyed plot to scuttle the sea forces. The orientation tour, on which Mr. Johnson was joined by the service Secretaries and the Joint Chiefs of Staff, was an exercise in interservice education that should be extended to other top officers not fully acquainted with the techniques of their brother arms. For the advent of the Russian atomic bomb means, if nothing else, that interservice ignorance and sniping are luxuries which the country cannot afford.

Manifold advances under unification cannot obscure the fact that the strategists are hampered by the rival polarization of service opinion around the Air Force B-36 bomber and the Navy supercarrier. Naval aviation has come out second best, and this has led some service zealots of the Crommelin school to make public and demoralizing attacks on unification. The outbreak has enlisted persons whose protests are nothing but expressions of resistance to change. However, the Air Force-Navy feud has tended to distort an objective view of what each service has to offer.

Unification was never intended to bring merely an either-or choice between, say, Air Force strategic bombing and carrier aviation. Rather, it was designed to enable military planners to make the best use of instruments, regardless of what particular service they belong to, which would carry out a predetermined over-all strategy. It is obvious that all elements—air, land and sea—are factors in any war that can now be envisaged. This is the case, certainly, with the Russians. For example, in addition to their development of an atomic bomb, the Russians are known to have placed great stress on tank production as well as on schnorkel submarines. Who would deliver an American atomic bomb in the event of war is of much less importance than that there be balanced forces—that is to say, forces balanced as to purpose and power.

Possibly the Russian atomic feat may warrant a reconsideration of American defense plans in light of the disruption of expectations. The Russian bomb by no means makes atomic bombing inevitable, however, and it would be dangerous if the principal American reaction were merely to place additional emphasis on strategic bombing. It is imperative to think through strategy beyond the atomization of cities to the question of war aims and how they could best be accomplished, and in this respect the Navy has a thesis that ought to be listened to. Such issues can be talked out fully only if the Joint Chiefs become a genuinely unified planning body divorced from advocacy of any particular service or weapon. It would be prudent to relieve members of the Joint Chiefs of all but nominal administrative duties so that they could devote their major attention to consideration of the whole defense.

Dr. Ruhland Retires

A quarter of a century ago Dr. George C. Ruhland proved in a remarkable demonstration at Syracuse that public health is purchaseable. Under his skillful direction, the Syracuse public health budget was more than doubled and brought a remarkable decline in the death rate. Other cities began to copy the successful Syracuse experiment. The result, according to Homer Folks, was an awakening of public opinion as to the value of advanced public health work. In 1935 the District of Columbia, searching the country for the best available public health administrator, invited Dr. Ruhland to take over its moribund Health Department. As Dr. Ruhland now goes into retirement after 15 years of service here, he has once more proved in unmistakable terms that public health is purchaseable when the spending is directed by hands as capable as his own.

Dr. Ruhland's first year in the District gave us the Bureau of Public Health Nursing under a full-time director. In the years that followed he set up the Bureau of Tuberculosis Control, the Bureau of Maternal and Child Welfare, the Bureau of Public Health Education, the Crippled Children's Clinic, the pneumonia control program, the blood bank, the housekeeping aide project, the Bureau of Venereal Disease Control, the Bureau of Mental Hygiene, the Bureau of Cancer Control and numerous health-promoting agencies. In 1940 Washington's first health center was opened in the southwest sector. Several abandoned schools have since been converted into health centers and clinics. The department has acquired 16 dental clinics and an equal number of neighborhood maternal and child health clinics. Gallinger Municipal Hospital was transferred to the Health Department in 1937 (along with the Glenn Dale Sanatorium) and has undergone a heartening transformation. Among the most notable improvements was the appointment of five full-time medical officers at Gallinger. The city's hospitals in general have been notably expanded and modernized, and the Health Department has become a model that other cities are copying.

At no time has Dr. Ruhland had all the funds requested for public health services, but the appropriation for his department did expand from $519,867 in 1935 to $2,948,338 in fiscal 1950, exclusive of hospital costs and medical charities. Dr. Ruhland has used these funds to good advantage. In the decade before he came, for example, the District was losing from 20 to 30 persons a year to diphtheria. The toll was sharply reduced until the year 1944 passed with not a single diphtheria fatality here.

Far more significant is the manner in which the death rate from all causes has tumbled. In the 15 years before Dr. Ruhland took over, the death rate had remained stationary, with from 14 to 15 deaths per 1000 population. Meanwhile, the national death rate was gradually declining from 13 to 10.9 per 1000 population. After the Ruhland policies had been in effect a couple of years, the local death rate began a general downward movement that has carried it from 14 in 1935 to 9.9 in 1948. Back in 1935 our death rate was 28 percent above the national average; now it is 1 percent below the national average. That is a remarkable performance.

For this record, Dr. Ruhland has earned the profound thanks of the community. He is the first to recognize that there are still many deficiencies in our health program. But the improvements he has effected are so numerous and so fundamental that the city will be satisfied with nothing less than continuation of his policies. The greatest tribute that can be paid him, among the many that are coming his way this week, is the insistence of the people that the best qualified health administrator available be appointed to succeed him.

Women Voters

The zest with which American women have participated in the country's political life during the past decade has been immensely invigorating to the democratic process. This zest has been the product in no small part of persistent educational efforts by the League of Women Voters, a nonpartisan organization devoted to the promotion of political responsibility through informed and active participation of citizens in government. The league, with some 700-odd local branches, equips its members with the facts about contemporary issues and with knowledge of the techniques necessary to make themselves felt as an effective political force.

Here in Washington, the league will inaugurate next week a series of 11 regional conferences to train women leaders in ways to stir voters to acceptance of party responsibility. The party system, it recognizes, is basic to the representative form of American Government. Therefore, without attachment to any particular party, the league proposes to prod, and use, both the major parties for achievement of the aims its members desire. No doubt it will make itself felt very formidably in the congressional elections next year. In urging its members to take part in party activities, particularly at the primary level, and in giving them the background to take part intelligently, the league will exercise, as in the past, an extremely salutary influence.

Aggression In China

Whether the General Assembly will take up Nationalist China's complaint against Soviet Russia will be determined by the Assembly's 14-nation steering committee. But there is nothing in the Charter to prohibit any such consideration. Under Article 10 the General Assembly may discuss pretty nearly any grievance in the mind of a member nation. To be sure, the subject must be "within the scope" of the Charter, but the great principle of that instrument, as Mr. Evatt, its greatest expositor, puts it, is justice, and on this score Nationalist China has reason to arraign Soviet Russia. The Nationalist government to which Moscow pledged moral and material aid in 1945 has, for instance, been excluded from Manchuria. Here, under the Sino-Soviet treaty validating the Yalta deal, the Russians agreed to share railroad control and also to leave with the Chinese the responsibility for administering Manchuria's great port, Dairen.

However, while the case against Russia in Manchuria is morally strong, it lacks weight on strictly legal grounds. Christopher Rand cabling from Hongkong in the New York Herald Tribune points out that the initial experience of Sino-Russian railroad administration does not put the Chinese in any too favorable a light. Chiang Kai-shek dispatched to Manchuria as well as to Formosa a sorry crew of carpetbaggers. "In that time," reports Mr. Rand, "several of the Russian railway employes were killed or otherwise maltreated, and the rest were given nothing like the parity jobs the treaty called for." Russian protests were disregarded till the Russians took action themselves. Even in Dairen the Chinese case—that China has been deprived of treaty rights—is subject to a plausible rebuttal. Evidently the Chinese have failed to make any attempt to establish those rights by trying to enter the port—the reason being that, since the Russians would not allow any military escort, they felt they would not be protected. However, Mr. T. F. Tsiang is a diplomat of skill and astuteness, and he will no doubt make the most of his case, if he gets a hearing.

What will be more difficult to establish is a case against Soviet Russia for masterminding and aiding the Communist irruption. This is the aspect of Nationalist China's complaint that defies exact analysis. Russian influence is clear from the un-Chinese discipline prevailing among the soldiery who are spearheading the Communist victories. The ideology and practices of Mao Tze-tung adhere to the Stalinist line. Whether Mao Tze-tung has Russian advisers appears to be impossible to determine. Arms he has had from Soviet Russia, but they seem to have been abandoned Japanese arms, not consigned arms. And how much of the armament came from Manchurians who were disaffected by the conduct of Chiang's carpetbaggers is a moot point. Mr. Tsiang may have some vouched-for information up his sleeve, but, even if he does add to the existing evidence, we doubt whether he can show that Mao Tze-tung had anything like the Russian support that Chiang Kai-shek had when he vaulted to power in 1927. What has happened in China is basically a Chinese (i.e., an internal) phenomenon.

Mass Murder

The police of Quebec say they have obtained from one Mrs. Marie Pitre a confession that she planted a crude time bomb inside the Canadian Pacific airliner that exploded last week while in flight. On the strength of the putative confession the police have arrested a Canadian jeweler named J. Albert Guay and have accused him of having planned the whole murderous business, for no other purpose, as it seems, than to rid himself of the wife who, while she lived, was an obstacle to his adulterous affairs with Mrs. Pitre and others. It was Guay, according to the police, who induced his wife to take passage on the plane. Nor, apparently, did he mind turning the murder to profit; for it is said that he took out a life insurance policy of $10,000 for her on which he paid a premium of 50 cents.

The motive in this case is familiar enough to readers of crime news and to students of historic murder trials. What distinguishes the case is the apparently cold-blooded unconcern for the fate of 22 other persons in the plane, all of them complete strangers to Mr. Guay, whose lives had in no way affected his own. It is this, and the element of calculation entering into the whole affair, that makes it seem more horrible even than the senseless slaughters accomplished recently by young Howard Unruh at Camden, N. J.

And yet these are only two instances out of many in the recent news of wholesale killing for reasons of lust or money or for no reason at all. Such cases indeed follow one another so rapidly that they have only an evanescent news value. One might contrast the short-lived interest of the public in such cases to the sustained interest in the case of the late Harry Thaw, for example. It is perhaps as good an index as any to the diminished value placed in our age upon the importance of individual lives; and also perhaps a measure of the growth of the power of evil within a single generation.

GI Dividends

In your issue of September 17, you carried an article giving an outline of the proposed dividend payments to be made to veterans holding Government insurance for World War II. According to a table shown in that article the younger the veteran the greater the rate of his dividend.

This seems neither fair nor logical. I realize that the man under 40 is a better risk than the man over 55, but that difference is taken care of by the amount of the premium each pays. The premiums are adjusted to allow for the difference in risk.

Presumably the total of all the premiums paid by any man, no matter what his age, is figured to be sufficient to pay his heirs the amount of his policy and pay the Government the cost of carrying the account plus a certain amount of profit, or overage, to keep the fund in good financial condition. Therefore, total payments made to the fund by all veterans carrying insurance will, at the presumed time of death, be the same. Why, then, should the younger veteran, who has paid less to date per thousand, receives a greater amount per thousand?

I was informed by one private life insurance company that if a man took out insurance at the age of 18 he would receive approximately $5 per thousand as a dividend for the first year, and that at the age of 55, on the same policy, he would receive approximately $11 per thousand. In other words, the rate of dividend depends upon the amount paid in and the age has nothing to do with it. BROWN ROLSTON.

Hansom Cabs

I viewed with interest your September 22 photograph of a "collector's item" showing the so-called "hansom cab" used by the last Mayor of Washington.

This type of carriage came to me as a shock under the title of "hansom cab." I knew Mr. McReynolds personally when he conducted his shop at the address given, and I am certain he would not concur in the nomenclature accorded his product. Just to keep the record straight, and to this extent protect the younger generation, many of whom have been denied the thrill of riding in a genuine hansom (unless having done so on a New York trip where they are still in vogue in Central Park), I quote Webster as follows:

"Hansom cab. (Named after John A. Hansom, 1803-82. English Inventor). A light, two-wheeled, covered carriage with the driver's seat elevated behind. (Sic!), the reins being passed over the top."

High School Cadets

As a recent high school graduate I am following with much interest the argument now raging as to the reasons for the deterioration of the high school cadet corps. It occurs to me that at least one significant aspect of the argument has been either accidentally neglected or deliberately overlooked.

Amid all the statements made on the subject there appears to be not one asking objectively whether or not there ought to be a reexamination of the reasons for and purposes of a military organization in a public system of education.

One of the chief arguments of advocates of the corps is that it can give youth training in teamwork and a necessary respect for properly constituted authority. However, so can the Boy Scouts. Is not this point of view also an indirect admission of some failing in our public school system?

The question as to the value of the military training received by the cadets is essentially a problem for trained military men, but it should be pointed out that the emphasis of today's armed forces recruiting campaigns is on the highly technical nature of the military establishment and the advantages service training brings to its members. Comparable training is by no stretch of the imagination a task for the public schools.

The basic question is: Would there be a recognized need for the corps if there were no law authorizing it?

Idlers in Government

The Hoover Commission reports have attracted considerable attention, even if less than deserved. Attention has been called to allegation that out of 49 agencies commented upon in the reports as a little extravagant and with opportunities for more efficiency and less waste, only six have admitted any possibility of savings whatsoever.

Our main objection to parasites and idlers on the rolls with equal rank and rights toward retirement with producers and workers is that they employ too much of their time (on the Government payroll) working on their Congressmen to increase bureaucracy with increasing numbers on increasing salaries at taxpayers' expense. We taxpayers don't like it.

"Hemisphere Policy"

Secretary Acheson's statement of the official theory of recognition, mentioned in your September 21 editorial. "Hemisphere Policy," explains the unsuitability of our foreign policy.

". . . our act of recognition need not be taken to imply approval of (a government) or its policies."

The Estrada Doctrine is just, but it just isn't the principle which should govern international relations. It is merely a corollary to the basic law, which is: The act of recognition implies that the faction thus distinguished is the one approved by the inhabitants (in the opinion of the donor).

Recognition is but a judgment of an existing situation. As such it is a subject for consultation, but not for compromise. (If we believe a regime to be a minority, we should ask our neighbors for their contradictory evidence, but we should not recognize it for the sake of conformity.)

Those who advocate permanence in our relations with other states overestimate the benefits of such procedure. Our objective should be to keep in constant communication with other nations. When through external or internal aggression a nation loses control of its destiny temporarily, we should not abandon it in favor of its oppressors, for all their commitments will be invalidated later. (In the event of a coup our ambassador to Graustark should accompany the democratic regime to a hotel in Cleveland.)

The dire consequence of recognizing illegitimate governments is that we thereupon devote our efforts toward accommodating them, whereas we should be assisting in ousting them, because their instability (their undemocratic nature) is a threat to the peace.

While the State Department operates on this directive, it is not competent to conduct our relations with controversial regimes in Spain, China, Yugoslavia, Argentina and elsewhere.

"The Budapest Trials"

It is a very praiseworthy attitude of a newspaper to admit an editorial error. However, such admissions should not be abused by letter writers unknown to your readers.

You publish on your editorial page of September 25 a letter, correcting the name of Bela Kun to George Dimitrov, by an anonymous correspondent signed L. H. B., who for reasons known only to himself does not want to reveal his name. And then he proceeds under your protection of anonymity to distort the meaning of your editorial of September 20 on the Budapest trials, which, according to him ". . . reveal a long-range Western-Titoist master plan within the Soviet orbit to arrange the assassination of Red chieftains pledged to follow the guidance of the Politbureau and the Cominform."

I doubt very much that the editorial writers or the readers of The Washington Post would believe that Mr. Churchill, Mr. Allen Dulles, or Mr. Chapin, our former Minister to Budapest, are, or ever were, parties of such a fantastic plan.

Though you say that L. H. B. is absolutely right—no doubt meaning the correction of the names but surely not the rest of the letter—I am certain your editors cannot possibly agree with the concluding paragraph of the anonymous letter writer who says that ". . . the Budapest trials are just another manifestation of the head-on collision of the two opposing world social systems and philosophies and an episode of this world struggle, of which we are allowed to see only the cops and robbers antics of the spy and intelligence services of the rivals trying to outsmart and exterminate each other."

These are amazing accusations, not only against American diplomats serving in Budapest but in a broader sense against all the Western governments, including our own Administration, past and present. Unlike the Soviet, ours is a free country, and it is to be wondered why anybody who cares to make such sweeping accusations against the British and American governments, referring to their official representatives as "Western-Titoist master planners of assassinations, etc.," should do so behind a screen of anonymity, posing as a dispassionate observer, as if watching the struggle from an Olympian height and dishing out words of wisdom and correction to erring editors and their readers.

If he knows, as he intimates, "that perhaps there is more to these trials than meets the eye of the superficial and detached observer," then he should tell us what he knows and should not hide behind editorial courtesy of anonymity to tell stories which follow pretty closely the lines of the devious method of the fellow travelers to confuse the issues. This is precisely what L. H. B. was doing, by abusing your editorial page.

Bickering As Usual

AN ANNIVERARY passed unnoticed the other day. It was the second birthday of the unification of the armed services. But the children who should have been celebrating the birthday were too busy quarreling with each other to pay any attention.

The principal quarrel is still concerned with the B-36 bomber and the smoldering resentment of the Navy at having been denied the superaircraft carrier. But it is fast degenerating to the level of a backyard bicker over which washing is guilty of tattletale gray.

The Navy lost the first round in a most embarrassing and conspicuous way. During the investigation conducted by the House Armed Services Committee a Navy civilian assistant, Cedric Worth, admitted writing the undercover memorandum that raised doubts about the decision to concentrate production on the B-36.

The Navy then ordered a formal court of inquiry, headed by Admiral Thomas C. Kinkaid, to determine where the blame lay. But the Navy never says die. The court quickly became another battleground.

The objective was to get Secretary of the Air Force Stuart Symington to come before the court in person. So a kind of Alice-in-Wonderland business began. Mr. Symington was invited to play croquet with the Navy. Mr. Symington declined. Mr. Symington was summoned to play croquet. Mr. Symington refused.

At this point the Navy's civilian chief, Secretary Francis P. Matthews, stepped in. He said that Mr. Symington didn't have to go and play with the Navy if he didn't want to.

IT WAS more than absurd to demand that the civilian chief of one of three branches of the service, an official with near Cabinet rank, go before a military court. What made this proposal more outrageous was that Symington, if he had gone before the court, would have been cross-examined by Worth or an attorney for Worth.

The Navy's dark suspicion is that the whole story was never disclosed before the House committee. That is probably true. But at the same time the Navy is insisting that Worth prepared the secret memorandum all by himself, and that is too preposterous for anyone to believe.

While all this was going on, there was a tremendous buzzing back and forth. GHQ of the Air Force was reporting on the Navy's underground. And the Navy underground was bringing in its own secret intelligence.

In some respects this backfence bickering gives a false impression. Unification of the services has been conspicuously advanced since the act was first adopted on September 17, 1947.

The first Secretary of Defense was James Forrestal. For 18 months he wrestled with problems that were insoluble in large part because of the limited terms of the original Unification Act. His suicide last May was taken as tragic confirmation of his failure.

For six months Louis Johnson has been Secretary of Defense. The Unification Act has been amended to give him expanded powers. As Johnson has frequently said, many of the steps he is pushing nearer to realization were initiated by his predecessor.

IN A number of fields duplication and overlapping are being ended. One of the big jobs was to merge the Air Transport Command with the Naval Air Transport Service into a Military Air Transport Service. In purchasing, in maintenance and in operation essential economies are being effected and the hope is for greater efficiency, too.

Johnson has had to make many difficult and some unpopular decisions. He will have to make more decisions like that if he carries through on unification.

But ever since the end of the war one overwhelming fact has supported the effort to unify the services. The American economy, as now constituted, will support a sufficient minimum of military strength only if there are drastic economies and a pruning out of the useless and the antiquated. In other words, the three services cannot have all that each of them wants.

Item No. 1 on the security budget is the more than one billion dollars a year in cash and contract authority spent by the Atomic Energy Commission, most of which goes to produce atomic bombs. Since President Truman's fateful announcement that Russia has produced an atomic explosion, news which should have surprised no one, that item is even more imperative. If the country will not finance a military establishment that includes all the weapons of past, present and future, then there must be inevitable and painful sacrifices.

"Spring In Park Lane"

Some people are going to miss a very nice movie all because Richard L. Coe in your September 23 issue said that Spring In Park Lane is a dreary whimsy and not worth bothering about. How wrong he is, in my opinion! I was held "glued to the page" all the way through, greatly pleased with its charm, good humor, good acting, and good fun. It was a picture of good taste, and I would rate it near the top for those who are looking for a movie that will entertain and hold the interest without the subterfuges glamour, unrealities, and false comedy that Hollywood insults us with.

Matter Of Fact

By Joseph and Stewart Alsop

The Beria Bomb: II

THE TRANCELIKE reception of the news that the Soviets have exploded an atomic bomb is a bitter commentary on the quality of American leadership. Scare-mongering is bad, but it is even worse for the leaders of a democracy not to tell the people the truth. And the plain truth is that the United States and the Western world are totally unprepared for the new situation that has now arisen.

For four years, all the plans of the Joint Chiefs of Staff have been squarely based on a single expectation. This was the expectation that our monopoly of atomic weapons would continue, for a while, to deter any Soviet aggression. But now the monopoly has been broken, and we must inquire into the state of our affairs.

The same plans of the Joint Chiefs in which our atomic monopoly bulked so large, also established certain things that were essential to do before the Soviets had an atomic bomb of their own. Although a Beria bomb has now been successfully exploded, there will still be a little time before the Kremlin commands a decisive stockpile of its new weapons. But this time will be very short—perhaps two years—and the things that the Joint Chiefs say must be done are very big. In brief, all American security planning sets two minimum objectives.

First, balanced ground, naval and air forces must be provided by the Atlantic community, to withstand at least the initial shock of an attack on Europe by the Red army. If Europe goes, the sequel will be intercontinental warfare. And any intercontinental war will be unthinkably horrible, prolonged and destructive, ending perhaps in victory, but quite certainly with the world in ruins.

SECOND, the European-American balanced defensive force must be supplemented with a special American offensive striking force, which will hit the very vitals of the Russian state with our own absolute weapons the moment war breaks out. If the Soviet organism is not thus crippled in the first moment of aggression, any balanced force we can organize will not be strong enough to defend western Europe. The Red army will reach the Atlantic, and the phase of intercontinental war will begin.

This American security plan is like a deadly but delicate mechanism, which will only work if each of its parts are perfect, and all parts are perfectly adjusted to each other. Anyone who has followed the debates on military aid for Europe must know that we do not have today the balanced defensive force that we need. And as yet, Joint Chiefs of Staff plans only call for creating the minimum defense force in rather more than four years.

Thus the first part of the mechanism is missing. So too is the second. Under Joint Chiefs of Staff plans, the projected offensive striking force is to be, primarily, an American strategic Air Force. All the chiefs have agreed that a 70-group Air Force is the smallest that can do the job. But President Truman and Secretary of Defense Louis Johnson have themselves been hard at work this session cutting the Air Force down to 48 groups. Production of aircraft and training of crews for the requisite strategic Air Force has already been gravely set back.

FURTHERMORE, a strategic Air Force cannot operate in a vacuum. A 70-group Air Force was approved as adequate, on the assumption that a powerful chain of bases overseas would permit more efficient operations over shorter distances from Soviet targets. The bases now occupied by our B-29 units in England are only a minor part in this essential chain. Bases for the offensive striking force are certainly needed in North Africa, probably in the Middle East, and possibly in Pakistan. These bases do not exist, and the political measures to have them made available have not even been undertaken.

In short, we have the blue print of a defense mechanism, and not the mechanism itself. The greatest efforts of military preparation will do us little good after Europe has been overrun. The largest stockpiles of bombs at Hanford and Oak Ridge will do us no good whatever if these and other obsolute weapons cannot be laid down when needed on Stalingrad, and Chelyabinsk, and Magnitogorsk. In the new situation in which we find ourselves, we are appallingly unready.

In the face of these bleak facts, a great many people may console themselves with the happy thought that perhaps the Kremlin cherishes no aggressive intentions. But really moonstruck powers of self-delusion are needed to believe that if the Soviet Union achieves superior military power this power will not be used for all it is worth. And in this cruel world, the moonstruck rarely survive.

signatures on a petition to recommit the bill to the expenditures committee, and claiming a dozen more names not on the petition. Twenty-two Senate Democrats supported it.

Early this week leaders of the group agreed to call off the recommittal drive in return for a compromise. The substitute draft, scaling down the pay increases, was completed and introduced yesterday. Thirty-three Senators signed it, and at least 15 more votes for it were pledged.

Senate Democratic Leader Scott W. Lucas (Ill.) told newsmen last night he has "agreed to accept the substitute."

"It was a question of taking that or getting no bill at all, because they have the votes," Lucas said. "The compromise is not so bad. It provides substantial increases in many top offices. I would prefer the larger increases proposed by the President. But we must have an executive pay bill this session, and I think this one will pass."

Two economy "riders" meanwhile were dropped into the hopper:

1. By Senator Homer Ferguson (R., Mich.) directing the President to slash general appropriations 5 to 10 per cent below budget.

2. By Senator John L. McClellan (D., Ark.) directing the President to present a balanced budget in 1950, even if it is in addition to his regular budget, to "show Congress where to cut."

The Ferguson amendment represented a revival of a general "5 and 10" cut originally pressed by McClellan.

It went to a vote as a rider on the National Defense bill August 29, rolled up a 49 to 28 majority, falling just shy of the required two-thirds.

Ferguson pointed out last night that only a simple majority is required to tie it to the "germane" executive pay bill.

Leaders apparently are so convinced that it has the votes that they won't make another party-splitting fight. House appropriations chiefs are practically certain to kill it in conference, however.

The compromise executive pay bill, to which the rider would be tied, likewise appeared so sure of approval that it needed only to go to a formal vote.

Some of the Senate's ranking Democrats led the petition movement resulting in the compromise. They included Senators Edwin C. Johnson (Colo.), Ernest W. McFarland (Ariz.), Richard B. Russell and Walter F. George (Ga.) and Burnet R. Maybank (S. C.).

The compromise introduced yesterday was signed by these Senators: Johnson, Connally (D., Tex.), George, Maybank, McKellar (D., Tenn.), McFarland, Byrd and Robertson (D., Va.), Russell, Withers and Chapman (D., Ky.), Eastland and Stennis (D., Miss.), Sparkman (D., Ala.), Gillette (D., Iowa), Holland (D., Fla.), Hoey (D., N. C.), Fulbright (D., Ark.), Taft (R., Ohio), Ferguson, Cain (R., Wash.), Wherry and Butler (R., Nebr.), Malone (R., Nev.), Hendrickson (R., N. J.), Watkins (R., Utah), Jenner (R., Ind.), Schoeppel (R., Kans.), Martin (R., Pa.), Kem (R., Mo.), Bricker (R., Ohio), and Tobey (R., N. H.).

remain at 10 days. Several House members took the floor to insist that postal employes be given 26 days annual and 15 days sick leave a year like other Federal workers.

Finally, the Postoffice Department would be required to supply uniforms, or a maximum of $100 annual allowance per employe, for all postal workers required to wear them.

The bill would go into effect the first day of the first pay period after its enactment.

Despite Administration opposition, the bill had the minimum of opposition from the House floor. Representative Mason (R., Ill.) offered a motion to strike from the bill the provision to wipe out the first two grades. He was shouted down. However, he was supported by Representative Bell Williams (D., Miss.) who pointed out that the average wage of school teachers during the 1947-48 year was $1995.

Chairman Murray, who voted for the bill, did so apologetically. He said the bill was a "makeshift" and that it threw the postal classification act out of balance. "Our committee," he said, "wasn't given enough time to bring out a proper and more equitable bill." He reminded his colleagues that 218 of them had signed a petition to discharge his committee from further study of the Miller bill while his subcommittee was in the midst of hearings on it.

Murray also said that the Congress had been "extremely liberal" with the postal employes and it had given them an average increase of $1440 each since 1945.

At least 50 House members spoke in favor of the bill, many of them advocating larger pay raises and other benefits. Representative Miller (D., Calif.), author of the bill along with Representative John Lyle (D., Tex.), insisted that the committee had given ample study to the legislation.

The Miller bill now goes to the Senate, where an attempt will be made to get it substituted for the Long postal pay bill. The Long bill would give postal employes a flat $100 raise and abolish the first two grades. It is far more conservative than the House bill.

The classified bill, on the other hand, isn't expected to have as smooth sailing in either the House or the Senate, although its approval in some form is predicted. A powerful move is afoot in the Senate to raise the ceiling for classified employes from $10,330 to $12,500 instead of to $15,000, as provided in the bill, or to $16,000, as proposed by the White House.

warrant officer promotions and pay increases on a basis of longevity instead of selection. It will mean additional pay boosts for many veteran warrant officers.

Senior major generals and above will get an increase of $251 a month for a total of $1146 monthly in the final version. Senior brigadiers will receive $306.50 more each pay day, or $1018 per month.

Colonels get a boost of $138—to $831—and second lieutenants $48 more, or $330 monthly in all. Corporals with seven years in uniform get a $97 increase, to $238 monthly. Sergeants get raises of from $72 to $89 a month. Privates are raised $2.50 to $8.40 monthly.

The wartime system of family allowances, whereby men of low rank with many children drew more than some top-ranking noncoms, will be gradually elimnated. Other special pay and allowances will be cut or dropped.

Regulations covering the new pay system are in final form and will be issued shortly after the bill is signed. Meanwhile, it is expected that an executive order will be issued this week continuing present per diem and some subsistence allowances until new rates are set.

Gun Factory Gets Scroll For Work

Tribute was paid the Naval Gun Factory yesterday for its contribution to national defense and to Washington in "District Day" ceremonies there.

Part of the factory's week-long observance of its 150th anniversary, the ceremonies featured presentation of a scroll to Rear Admiral Frank G. Fahlion, factory superintendent, by Frederick P. H. Siddons, president of the Washington Board of Trade.

Siddons termed the scroll "an expression of civic pride" in the gun factory, and noted the plant's contribution to national defense. Admiral Fahlion accepted it in behalf of factory personnel.

He told an estimated 3000 persons at the waterfront ceremonies, many of them factory workers, that "it is the work you have done through the years as a team that made this occasion possible."

While intermittent rain held attendance down, only one activity scheduled yesterday—preliminaries of the all-service tennis tournament—was postponed. The most spectacular feature was the demonstration by a four-man Navy underwater demolition team.

The gun factory today will observe "Armed Forces Day," with the 125-acre yard open to public from 1 p. m. to 6 p. m. Attractions include:

Band concert, noon, 2 p. m., and 3:30 p. m.; combat movies, 1 p. m. to 4 p. m.; guided tours for area military personnel, 1:30 p. m.; tennis tournament, 2 p. m.; underwater demolition team demonstration, 3 p. m.; sailing demonstration, brig Wasp, 3 p. m.

that a nuclear engine for aircraft, capable of almost infinite range and speeds faster than sound, is a "distant possibility." Power demands rise rapidly as speed increases.

The NACA said only last week that 45,000 horsepower is required to drive a 25-ton plane 1500 miles an hour at 70,000 feet. That altitude is beyond the current operational limit of jets and piston engines. The power requirement would jump to 200,000 horsepower at sea level because of the greater air resistance.

The Air Force is interested in extreme speeds and altitudes, however. The B-36, comparatively slow and having a prospective altitude of 50,000 feet or so, now can strike at a range of around 4500 miles. The Air Force would like to be able to fly out half again as far and return to base. That would permit striking any target in the world from bases on this continent.

It would mean bomber approaches could be varied to avoid interception, and it would mean reconnaissance planes could seek out targets and report on damage.

Secret Report on China ECA Bites 'Watchdog' Committee

By Robert S. Allen

A sensational bottled-up report is playing a big role in the adamant stand of the House against continuing the so-called Joint Congressional Marshall Plan Watchdog Committee.

The report charges that ECA funds have been used to employ former Nazi and Jap agents, as well as Soviet citizens.

However, although submitted by investigators of the Watchdog Committee and printed as an official document months ago, the report has never been released. Similarly, the committee has never said or done anything about the numerous serious allegations in the document.

Juicy Patronage Grab

Meanwhile, under the chairmanship of Senator McCarran (D., Nev.) the committee is trying to get another $344,000 to continue its operations. The committee has the largest and highest-paid staff in Congress. One employe, Charles Dewey, former Illinois Republican Congressman, gets $15,000 and a score of others between $8500 and $12,000. The payroll is one of the juiciest patronage grabs in Washington.

Continuance of the committee is only one of a number of sharp differences between the House and Senate on the six billion dollars ECA bill. Compared to this stupendous sum, the $344,000 item is infinitesimal. But the disclosure of the bottled-up report greatly intensified House antipathy toward the committee.

China Mission Involved

House conferees cited the report as complete confirmation of their contention that the committee has been wholly ineffectual in supervising ECA operations.

The charges in the report apply to the ECA China Mission.

According to the document, a high official of the mission "engaged in irregular practices concerning the conversion of local currency into United States dollars" and "staffed his organization with many persons of dubious character and background."

Among these employes listed by the report were the following:

"Statistician: His daughter admits guest membership in the Hitler Youth since 1936. A letter bearing her signature in the possession of the committee agents closes with a 'Heil Hitler.'

Secretary Wed to Red

"Secretary: She is the wife of one of the spokesmen of the Chinese Communist Party.

"Transportation Officer: He was at one time connected with the Indian Independence League, founded by the Japanese in 1942 for the purpose of inciting the people of India to rebel against the British.

"Stenographer: This person is a Soviet citizen, entertainer and informant.

"Administrative Assistant: He is a Korean by nationality who looks Chinese, but can neither read nor write the language. This man was an agent of the Japanese from 1936 until 1940. It is well known that as a result of his activities many Americans suffered untold hardships in Japanese internment camps."

The report asserts that the official who employed these people deposited more than $50,000 in counterpart funds to a private bank account.

The report is also highly critical of the mission's security. Regarding this the report says: "There is little security in operation with respect to either documents or personnel. Relative to personnel clearance and loyalty procedures, the only preparation made by ECA has been to appoint a Chinese national to investigate all personnel hired locally. This alien investigator was hired principally because he had entree into the five police stations located at Shanghai."

Vandenberg Undergoing Hospital Tests

Ann Arbor, Mich., Sept. 27 (AP). Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg (R., Mich.) rested today in the University of Michigan Hospital, where he is undergoing examination and diagnosis.

The nature of his illness, his physician reported last night, "is not definitely known."

[The United Press said the Senator's illness was reported due to a possible lung lesion.—Editor's note.]

"Several days will be spent in examination," Dr. John Alexander added. "Whether or not the Senator is to have an operation will naturally depend on the conditions we find."

President To Pose for Cartoonists

President Truman, probably the most cartooned man alive, will pose for some 40 ranking comic artists at noon Monday.

Their studio for the moment will be the White House, although the President is apt to find himself depicted in the company of other notables from faraway places, such as Steve Canyon, Steve Roper and Mickey Finn.

The pen-and-ink boys will arrive here Sunday to attend the three-day exhibit, "20,000 Years in Comics," to promote the United States Savings Bond program.

The premier for invited guests will be held Monday night in Coolidge Auditorium of the Library of Congress. The public may see the exhibit from 9 a. m. to 10 p. m. Tuesday and Wednesday.

Sponsors of the exhibit include the four Washington daily newspapers, the Newspaper Publishers Advisory Committee to the Treasury, the Library of Congress, the National Cartoonists Society, the New York State Library, the United States Savings Bond Division, and several newspaper feature syndicates.

A reception for the artists will be held at 2:30 p. m. Sunday on their arrival at National Airport. Rube Goldberg will be master of ceremonies, and Milton Caniff, creator of Steve Canyon, will speak.

They will be guests at a buffet at 5 p. m. at the Mayflower. The next event will be their meeting with President Truman at noon Monday, followed by a luncheon at the National Press Club at noon Tuesday.

Cartoonists for The Washington Post who will attend include Caniff, Ken Ernst (Mary Worth), Lank Leonard (Mickey Finn), Ed Reed (Off the Record), Allan Saunders (Steve Roper), George Wunder (Terry and the Pirates), and Herbert Block, Pulitzer prizewinning editorial cartoonist.

ECA Head Returns After Hospital Stay

Paul G. Hoffman, Economic Cooperation Administrator, returned to work this morning after an overnight stay in Doctor's Hospital as the result of a gall bladder attack.

A spokesman for ECA described the move as "purely precautionary." He went on to say that Hoffman's condition is such that the ECA administrator plans an overseas inspection of recovery operations some time in October.

'Poppy' Recalls Fields' Illness

By Richard L. Coe

IN THAT RICHLY amusing Saturday Evening Post series on W. C. Fields (soon to appear in book form), Robert Lewis Taylor tells of the filming of "Poppy", which is teamed with an earlier Fieldsian, "Million Dollar Legs," at the Little.

Fields had been ill through the entire shooting of this comedy, the second screening of what was one of his biggest stage hits. "I'd rather have people think I was drunk than sick," he told Director Eddie Sutherland.

Taylor reports, "According to Sutherland, Bill was only in a few scenes. 'We had to use his double, Johnny Sinclair, in everything but the close-ups.' One scene required Fields to crawl out from under a sink. By then his equilibrium had gone bad and he was scarcely able to walk. But he got under the sink; then, with his jaw set, began the torturing process of trying to stagger out, half crawling, half walking. He couldn't make it. As the others watched, anxious not to interfere and hurt his feelings, he got up and fell down three times.

"Sinclair played about 75 percent of the scenes that supposedly featured Fields," Taylor continues. "He had fixed on a new hobby; he often carried a pocket dictionary to look up words with which he was unfamiliar and he had adopted 'redundancy' as having agreeable possibilities of articulation. To the dismay of the script writers, about every fifth line he lifted his hat and, with a pleasing sneer, cried, 'Pardon by redundancy,' apropos of nothing."

I'd half forgotten this while watching "Poppy," which was filmed in '35, some 11 years and half a dozen pictures before Fields' death. It's a genial picture with a deal of arid spots.

Mata Machree

"Million Dollar Legs" is the better of the current revival bill, though it's not quite so inspired as "The Bank Dick." This one finds Fields as president of a whacky country which enters the Olympic games at Los Angeles to replenish its thin treasury. Lyda Roberti, a bright comedienne, plays Mata Machree, "the woman no man can resist," who does her best to exhaust the Klopstakia team.

There are many cheerful inanities in "Million Dollar Legs" (released in '32) which the factory belt situations of what pass for movie comedies these days don't touch.

Taylor has revealed that the "scripts" for which Fields was paid tidy sums by Paramount, Metro and Universal, were nothing more than a few notes on scraps of paper. He made up most of his plots and gags as he went along, dipping into 50 years of comedy experience. The result is that harum-scarum nonsense which has caused the current vogue for Fields revivals.

This bill isn't so inspired as "The Bank Dick" and "My Little Chickadee," but it still shows Fields pretty much in a comic class by himself.

FIRST SHOCK of the new season on the road is the closing next Saturday night at Ford's, Baltimore, of "Life With Mother" . . . With Co-Author Howard Lindsay and Mrs. Lindsay (Dorothy Stickney) in the leads, this was scheduled for a full-season tour . . . Producer Oscar Serlin lays the unexpected closing to "high operating costs with grosses insufficient to meet touring expenses" . . . He doesn't think the cities ahead look any more promising than Baltimore; frankly, I think Baltimore's a punk theater town. It's like pulling teeth to get the box office to sell you a ticket . . . But, considering "Mother's" mild 265 performances in New York, evidently people think they've seen "Life With Mother" or are being asked to revisit "Life With Father." . . . That's Lindsay's theory . . . Now he and pal Russel Crouse will be able to buckle down to that Ethel Merman musical about a lady ambassador . . . Sounds like Cicely Courtneidge's London musical about a lady ambassador to the Argentine who delivers the beef to Britain.

A NEW FIRM, Auvergne, has appeared at 63 Fifth ave., New York 3, publishing books on the theater . . . Their first three are handsome volumes, originally published by the Saturn Press in England . . . Choice indeed is a collection of Old Vic photographs by John Vickers, both color and performance shots, a stimulating record of the Old Vic's distinguished seasons under Laurence Olivier and Ralph Richardson . . . Another is a critical study by Monk Gibbon, with color performance shots, of "The Red Shoes"; balletomanes will especially enjoy this . . . Third is a similar record of Olivier's "Hamlet" edited by Brenda Cross . . . Auvergne hopes to publish further titles in the theater, dance and film fields, making a full career of what other publishing houses often consider a prestige sideline.

"ROSEANNA McCOY" holds over for a second week at Keith's, which means we'll have to wait a bit longer for Disney's combination of two classic stories, "The Legend of Sleepy Hollow" and "The Wind in the Willows" . . . He calls this feature, "Ichabod and Mr. Toad."

Youth Held In Theft Case

A 17-year-old, one of four youths and a girl accused of robbing a restaurant owner of $900 last July, was ordered held for grand jury action yesterday by Arlington County Court Justice Hugh Reid.

The youth, James Shively, 2740 14th st. nw., was released from juvenile custody on the basis of a probation officer's report, Judge Reid said. Bond was reduced from $5000 to $3000.

Victim of the robbery, J. L. Heatwole, 4140 Lorcum la., Arlington, testified at yesterday's hearing that Shively was one of the five persons who robbed him July 27 as he got off a bus with $900 in receipts from Britt's Restaurant, 1211 Wisconsin ave. nw. He is owner of the restaurant.

He identified the youth as the wielder of a "club" with which he was struck.

Ordered held for grand jury action last month, in connection with the same robbery, were three others: Charles Riddle, jr., 30, of 1871 Newton st. nw.; James H. Sebastian, 25, of 1346 Fairmont st. nw., and Ruth Colton, 20, of 1358 Fairmont st. nw. Another youth also is involved in the case.

Economist to Speak

Dr. Edwin Nourse, chairman of the President's Council of Economic Advisers, will speak on "The Economic State of the Nation" before the Alumni Club of Washington at 6:30 p.m. Thursday at the Trade Winds restaurant, 728 13th st. nw.

Ban on Child Star Threatens Disney Movie

London, Sept. 27 (AP).—A court decision threatened tonight to scuttle Walt Disney's $1,120,000 color movie "Treasure Island."

Beaconsfield magistrates ruled it is illegal for Bobby Driscoll, the film's 12-year-old Hollywood star, to work in England because he lacks a Labor Ministry permit.

A Disney spokesman said the decision might mean abandonment of the movie, which is three-quarters finished.

For acting at Denham Studio near London since July 4, the magistrates fined Bobby 100 pounds ($280). They levied similar fines against his father, Clethus J. Driscoll, and RKO-Walt Disney British Productions, Ltd., for aiding and abetting.

All three had pleaded innocent. They gave notice of appeal.

Realtor Named Head Of Seal Campaign

Roscoe C. Bangs, Arlington realtor, has been appointed chairman of the Arlington Tuberculosis Association's Christmas seal sale, D. Raymond Schwartz, president of the Association's board of directors, announced yesterday.

The seal sale, forty-third annual campaign to raise funds for the fight against tuberculosis, will begin November 21 and continue until Christmas.

Yankees Edge A's, 3-1, Keep Hope for Flag Alive

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

AFTER THAT THING in New York the other day, the grievestricken Yankees will always believe that the Red Sox ought to cut Umpire Bill Grieve in for a full world series share, if they win the pennant.

Certainly from a Yankee viewpoint it was Grieve, as much as Al Zarilla or Ellis Kinder, who beat 'em in that key game when he called Johnny Pesky safe at the plate with the winning run on Bobby Doerr's squeeze bunt.

POVICH

The pictorial evidence shows that the Yankees have a squawk coming, what with the ball plainly in Catcher Ralph Houk's mitt with Pesky still feet from the plate. But from there, the Red Sox have their own counter-arguments that Pesky was safe.

And the pictures that may be damning to Grieve, also pay him something of a tribute, too. He is one of the league's good umpires, and the shots show him on top of the play, in the correct position to call it, where a good umpire should be. The sequences also show that he didn't call it hastily.

The full details of the play actually didn't reveal themselves until the Red Sox were in the dressing room, having their full say about what happened.

THERE WAS SOME amazement that on such a perfect bunt, Pesky should be off so slowly from third base, and it was believable for a while that he had missed the squeeze sign. If Pesky had been running, it wouldn't even have been close.

And then Bobby Doerr took the rap, exonerating Pesky completely. "That's right," said Doerr. "Pesky didn't get the squeeze sign, because I didn't give any. He didn't know I was going to bunt. It was something I thought up all of a sudden. The only two persons in the Stadium who suspected I would bunt were myself and that smart guy, Tommy Henrich."

There were a couple of reasons, Doerr said, why he decided on the bunt, and why he withheld the sign from Pesky. "I liked the idea of a bunt because Page is no great fielding pitcher, and since they resodded Yankee Stadium it is nice turf for bunting.

"But I didn't dare to flash the sign to Johnny because Page can be wild and pitch that ball in 4 feet wide, and it would be a suicide play. So I counted on making the bunt good enough to let Johnny score even with a late start."

PESKY CORROBORATED Doerr's version, declaring "the first time I knew he was going to lay it down was when I saw him go into a crouch and slide his hands up on the bat. Then I took off. I made it, too. I don't care what the pictures show. I was in there before the tag."

Catcher Houk's loud squawks got only a significant shrug from Pesky after the game. "Bill Grieve called it right. Houk didn't put the tag on me. He should have, but that happens sometimes with rookie catchers. He had the ball in plenty of time, but he wasn't facing right to block the plate.

"Houk was trying to block the plate with his body, instead of waiting for me to slide into him, and he brought his hands up where they shouldn't be. I slid under him," said Pesky.

Pesky said he was properly surprised when Doerr bunted, and no wonder. "I've only been squeezed home once in my life, by Doerr or anybody else. And Bobby will tell you that it was the first time since 1946 that he tried to put on the squeeze."

THE RED SOX took a dim view of Yankee Outfielder Cliff Mapes' rumpus with Grieve after the game when Mapes cracked "How much did you have on the game?" Boston players were saying later that "Mapes, the big busher, couldn't even get into the game. It was all right for Stengel and Henrich and Houk to bleat about it, but whoever heard of Mapes?"

If Grieve lost his balance at any point, it was after Mapes' crack when the umpire remarked, "When you question an umpire's honesty, remember they've never thrown a ball game. You can't say that about ball players." What Grieve said was completely true, but unseemly under the circumstances.

Cal Hubbard, too, had something unkind to say about the Yankees when he reminded them, "a club that walks two men and blows two infield plays shouldn't squawk about an umpire's decision in the same inning." It wasn't tactful, perhaps, but how much abuse can an umpire take?

Cards Bow To Pirates, 6-4, Lead Cut To One Game

Pittsburgh, Sept. 27 (AP).—Rookie Outfielder Tom Saffell's home run with the bases loaded off Red Munger climaxed a five-run second inning and gave the Pittsburgh Pirates a 6-4 victory over the St. Louis Cardinals tonight.

The loss cut the Cards' first place margin over the idle Brooklyn Dodgers to one full game.

The defeat was St. Louis' sixth in 10 games here and gave the Pirates the season's edge, 11-10. The two teams meet again in the final tomorrow afternoon.

got only one run. Mele popped up, and Dente's fly to Zarilla got the run home, Early grounding out to end the session.

But in the eighth the Washington pests started getting obnoxious all over again, and in a sustained sort of way. Pinchhitter Gil Coan singled to right. Eddie Yost walked, Sherry Robertson singled to right, and so did Ed Stewart.

Masterson Takes Over

The Nats now had two more runs that pared Boston's lead to 6-3, and the Red Sox had a new pitcher—Masterson. He got them out of trouble speedily by throwing a double-play ball to Ortiz who was a victim of the Stephens-Doerr-Goodman combination.

Meanwhile, Robertson was scoring from third with the third Washington run of the inning, but Masterson was over the hump. He closed out the inning with Robinson's long fly.

In the ninth, the Nats momentarily interrupted Masterson's heroics when Sam Mele led off with a single to left. But before the Boston bull pen could get too much commotion under way, Sam Dente eased the pressure for the Sox. He hit into a double-play of the same Stephens-to-Doerr-to-Goodman type that had rescued the Sox an inning before.

That did it, or almost. Early sent everybody home with a modest fly to Zarilla.

One Hit Until Seventh

The Sox were having a merry evening of it most of the time. Dobson didn't give up any kind of a hit until Dente singled in the Washington fifth, and he owned a one-hitter going into the seventh.

Boston first pecked away at Calvert for single runs in the second and third, and then lowered the boom on him in a four-run sixth.

Bobby Doerr got the Sox their 1-0 lead very simply. After Stephens walked with none out, Doerr simply hit a lengthy double to center to score his pal all the way from first.

The Red Sox came up with another run in the third, but fluffed a more profitable inning by stumbling into a rare sort of double play. Singles by Dobson, DiMaggio and Williams got the run home. A bit later with Pesky on third and Williams on first, both runners tagged up on Stephens' fly to Stewart.

Run Ruled Out

Stewart's throw to Robertson flagged down the onrushing Williams at second base, and plate umpire Bill Summers ruled that Pesky hadn't scored before the third out. Bosox Manager Joe McCarthy squawked at length but the decision stood.

But the Sox were in a forgiving mood a few innings later. Pesky singled, Stephens singled, Doerr singled. With one run over, Zarilla bounced to Robertson and Doerr was run down between third and home for the second out. But runners moved up on the play and Goodman was handed an intentional pass. Tebbetts unloaded a two-run single, and Dobson contributed a single to center for the fourth run of the inning.

With their lead thus improved to 6-0, the Sox were now confronted by Sid Hudson, who got 'em out. Lloyd Hittle and Mickey Harris blanked 'em the rest of the way, but they had no need of more runs, it developed.

Maryland Figures to Win Over Hoyas—On Paper

By Jack Walsh
Post Reporter

Even members of the Association of Oldest Inhabitants can't recall when college football prospects in the Washington area looked so bright.

Happily a thing of the past are lack-luster elevens that had to strain to attract forlorn 5000 to 6000 "crowds" to Griffith Stadium.

The trend points only one way—up.

In the openers last week, Georgetown stirred the most enthusiasm by routing two-touchdown favorite Holy Cross, 20-13. The surprising Hoyas overcame a 13-0 defeat to do it and should have cashed in on three additional scoring opportunities.

Powerful Maryland, even under wraps, trounced VPI, 34-7. The losers, George Washington and Navy, didn't have to make any apologies.

Virginia got its expected revenge against GW, 27-13, but Bo Rowland's plucky Colonials tied it up before succumbing to the Cavaliers' manpower.

Navy uncovered Quarterback Bob Zastrow and an attack that tallied three times against mighty Southern California. The Middies are going to go.

First test of the revived interest around here takes place at College Park Friday night when Georgetown clashes with Maryland. It won't be much test, since only 18,000 can jam into antiquated Byrd Stadium.

Too bad Maryland's new stadium won't be ready until next year. Georgetown showed last Saturday it can give Maryland a real fight—one that easily could attract the capacity 33,500 the new bowl will accommodate.

On paper, Maryland has the edge over the Hoyas. But, then so did Holy Cross.

One of the big factors in Georgetown's soaring stock is the play of Quarterback Frank Mattingly, soph who handled the T-formation attack against Holy Cross with the finesse of a veteran.

Fines Too Quick

Yankees Call Harridge Bad As Grieve

New York, Sept. 27 (AP).—American League President Will Harridge today fined three New York Yankees a total of $500 for alleged mistreatment of an umpire—a move that led the pennant contenders to charge their league chief with being as wrong as the umpire involved.

Harridge led off by fining Yankee Outfielder Cliff Mapes $200 and demanding an immediate apology for remarks made to Umpire Bill Grieve.

The league head said he was advised that Mapes confronted Grieve after the game and asked him "how much did you have bet on the game?" That, said Harridge, was a reflection on the umpire's honesty. He also fined Yankee Manager Casey Stengel and Catcher Ralph Houk $150 each.

It all started in the eighth inning of yesterday's game when Johnny Pesky of Boston came roaring home from third base on a squeeze play. At the moment, the teams were deadlocked for the American League lead and the game was tied at 6-6.

Pesky hit the dirt as Houk took the throw from Tommy Henrich, who fielded Bobby Doerr's bunt. Grieve, the plate umpire, called the runner sage. That touched off the most spirited protest launched by the Yankees all season. With no further scoring in the game, it put the Red Sox a full game in front with five games to play.

And even after Harridge reached his decision today, the Yankees refused to take things lying down. General Manager George Weiss issued this statement:

"The management of the New York Yankees believes that the fines levied against Manager Stengel and two players for the debate with Umpire William Grieve following a decision at home plate were as hasty and erroneous as was the umpire's decision.

"The Yankees' conduct throughout the season has been exemplary despite a heated pennant race. These are the first fines levied against them all year and there has been only one instance wherein a player was expelled from a game.

"Obviously the provocation was great in this instance but only the umpire's side of the story has been taken into account despite the overwhelming pictorial evidence that Umpire Grieve "blew" a vital decision in a most vital game."

Raschi Hurls 4-Hit Ball To Chalk Up 20th Victory

By Jack Hand

New York, Sept. 27 (AP).—Still boiling with a charge that Umpire Bill Grieve "blew" the big decision in yesterday's game with Boston, the New York Yankees kept their pennant hope alive today by downing Philadelphia, 3-1, for Vic Raschi's twentieth victory.

Shortly after hearing that Outfielder Cliff Mapes had been fined $200 and Manager Casey Stengel and Ralph Houk, $150 each, for yesterday's argument with Grieve, the Yanks ripped into Dick Fowler for three big runs in the third inning.

The Yankees remained a full game out of first place as the Boston Red Sox beat Washington, 6-4.

Shantz Stops Bombers

After that outburst they were cooled off by little Bobby Shantz, Mr. Mack's pint-sized lefty, who allowed only one hit in a superb relief job over 5 2/3 innings.

Raschi, the Yanks' first 20-game winner since Spud Chandler in 1946, allowed only four hits in a workmanlike job. It was his third try at the American's 20 Club and he finally made it to join Boston's Ellis Kinder and Mel Parnell and Cleveland's Bobby Lemon.

Only in the sixth inning was he in serious trouble. And that was his own fault. Two of his six walks and Elmer Valo's single loaded the bases with one out. Even then he might have escaped with a shutout but for Jerry Coleman's wide throw that pulled Tommy Henrich off the bag, spoiling a potential double-play. As it was Eddie Joost, who waalked to open the inning, scored on the try for the double.

Fowler Walks Three

The Yanks cashed in on Dick Fowler's sudden wild streak in the third. Phil Rizzuto pumped a single to center. Then Fowler, a 14-game winner, walked Jim Delsing and Bobby Brown to fill the bases. He couldn't find the plate and also passed Henrich, forcing in a run. Yogi Berra's two-run single to center brought Shantz ambling to the scene. That was all, brother.

Raschi, the club's "stopper" in early season when he copped 11 of his first 12 games, finally halted the Yank tailspin.

The team that led the league all season until yesterday's disaster had dropped three in a row, all to Boston, and lost five of its last six starts before the A's came to town.

Schoolboy Players of Week

Sam Eberdt
WASHINGTON-LEE

IN HIS first game since he moved to W.-L. High from Greensboro, N. C., Halfback Eberdt turned in the greatest display of clutch passing seen in the area schools since Jack George pitched for St. John's. With the score 19-0 Central, an... only 9 minutes left, Eberdt cut loose with a barrage which netted W. L. three quick scores and a 19-19 tie. In that last period, the 6-foot 2-inch 190-pounder flipped passes, eight of them complete. One of the touchdown plays covered 53 yards with Jack Gilfillan his receiver. Central knew exactly what Eberdt was going to do in the last quarter, but was helpless to stop his tosses. For the evening, Eberdt clicked on 13 out of 21 attempts. He's only a junior and should make a lot of headlines in the coming two years.

Matias (Chow) Echaves
BULLIS PREP

IN HIS first football game in two years against Mount St. Mary's Frosh, Echaves showed he has completely recovered from eight broken ribs he suffered in an automobile crash last fall. Six feet tall and 190 pounds, Echaves broke the game wide open in the first 5 minutes with two brilliant touchdown runs, one on a 46-yard thrust inside tackle, and the other on a 53-yard sweep outside left end. Bullis won 26-0. A 10-second sprinter at Anacostia High, he was always injured before the third game of the season, and never attained the stardom that was predicted for him. He should be an asset to Bullis this year and to the Naval Academy in the future. His dad was a bosn's mate in the Navy years ago, and Chow is aiming to outrank his dad.

Sonofun Has Some Fun Winning Feature at Laurel

Bill Bennings . . .

AT LAUREL

DEAR FOLKS: High Frequency, beaten favorite here opening day, came out of that race with a fever and has been retired for the year, thus missing the Richard Johnson Stakes. The Wednesday feature, however, promises a lot of action with an excellent field of juveniles listed.

Jockey Buddy Root arrived from Wheeling where he was second leading rider. Betting here is far below expectations. A number of theories have been advanced but the reason can't be located. True, the number of big tracks running at this time forces Laurel to use horses from minor ovals for some races. However, in other years large fields of cheaper grade horses have drawn better betting than small fields of higher class thoroughbreds. See you on the rail. BILL.

Roughnecks Meet On Mat Tonight

George Macricostas and Laverne Baxter, two mat meanies, tangle tonight at Turner's. In what it claims is a precautionary measure to prevent mayhem, the management thoughtfully has arranged to have Milo Steinborn, former grappler, referee the affair.

3-Year-Old Gallops In by 2½ Lengths

By Walter Haight
Post Reporter

Laurel, Md., Sept. 27, 1949.—Cedar Farm's Sonofun, rested since early July, came back to the races in a running mood today. Opposed by a quartet of 3-year-olds, the son of Grand Time ran away with the Walter Reed, featuring the Tuesday program.

Second, 2½ lengths behind the fleet winner, was Richard A. Johnson's Black and Blue which went into the wire more than 6 lengths in advance of P. A. Rothfuss' Flicka Foot, star of the Maryland minor tracks. W. F. Wickes, jr.'s Seven Pillar and S. W. Labrot, jr.'s Ratine completed the vest-pocket field.

Sonofun in making it three victories in 11 tries this year, proved the fourth winning favorite of the day and returned a $3.40 mutuel. Under the handling of Jockey Benny Civitello, Sonofun was clocked in 1.13 for the 6 furlongs over a fast track and under heavy skies.

Strange rode his second winner of the day in the sixth race, the day's secondary feature. He brought Chanteuse from behind to win going away with daylight to spare in the test of a mile and a sixteenth.

Favorite players were off to a winning start. Choices clicked in the first three events, including both ends of the $18.60 daily double. J. A. Bell jr's Superba won the first race under the handling of Apprentice Gus Pappas to pay $6.40. Jockey Bobby Strange piloted the second winner, owned by Louis Hurwitz of Washington.

Willie Downs, former Charlestown star, rode the third race victor, G. A. Garretts' Mistambo, and the 2-year-old filly returned a mere $4 after outfooting 11 rivals. D. C. Harrison's The Orphan failed as the favorite in the fourth event, finishing fourth to R. B. Archer's Miss Gossip, a $10.60 shot ridden by Jockey Carson Kirk of Silver Spring, Md.

Harridge Blasts Mapes as Chief Villain

CHICAGO, Sept. 27.—American League President Will Harridge put the chief responsibility on Outfielder Clifford Mapes and sternly censured Manager Casey Stengel today as he acted swiftly to punish the New York Yankees for their fracas with Umpire Bill Grieve in yesterday's game with the Boston Red Sox.

The league chief fined Mapes $200 for his "How much did you have bet on the game?" remark to Grieve following the game. He taxed Stengel and Catcher Ralph Houk $150 each for their violence in protesting the play at home plate when Grieve called Boston's Pesky safe on a close play that meant a 7-6 victory and the league leadership for the Red Sox.

"In our opinion Clifford Mapes is guiltier than anyone else for his verbal attack on Grieve during and after the ball game," Harridge said, "Mapes was the only player who deliberately waited for the umpire and followed him to his dressing room despite being repeatedly cautioned against it by Umpire (Charles) Berry."

Houk was fined "for his conduct in charging and pushing Umpire Grieve and putting on an uncalled for demonstration over the decision," Harridge said.

Stengel's fine was levied "for your conduct in pushing the umpire and whirling him around."

"Never before to my knowledge has a player or manager been permitted to remain in the game after a demonstration of this kind," Harridge messaged Stengel. "We are making every honest effort to keep intact the clubs contending for the pennant. In this endeavor we assumed of course we would have the full cooperation of the players and the managers.

"Any recurrence by any member of your club of yesterday's conduct will result in automatic suspension for the balance of the season."

Harridge said that while the league "might be open to criticism" for failure to immediately banish Houk and Stengel yesterday, he believed "we have acted in the best interest of baseball. It is our desire that championship be decided on the field."

Harridge added he wanted to make clear that Grieve was assigned eight days ago to the Boston-at-Washington series starting tonight. He said the league had been asked why Grieve was moved out of New York for the Yankee game against the Philadelphia Athletics today.

Scarborough Tacktes Sox In 2d Game

THE SPECTRE of Ray Scarborough, such as it is, will confront the Red Sox tonight in the rtnewal of their semi-grim series with the eight-place Nats.

For the game Manager Joe Kuhel has reserved the same righthander who in the last week of the 1948 season knocktd the Red Sox out of the pennant.

Scarborough, the Nats' top pitcher, will be opposed by Chuck Stobbs, rookie lefthander.

Kuhel's use of Mickey Harris in a relief role last night will not necessarily shelve his plan to start Harris in tomorrow's third game of the series.

The Red Sox were chuckling yesterday with the announcement by Baseball Commissioner A. B. Chandler of their list of World Series eligibles. On the list was "John T. Tobin, coach."

"We're looking for Tobin, so we can send him his World Series check," said one Boston spokesman.

The Red Sox have no player or coach named Tobin. Johnny Tobin is a coach for the Browns.

THE NATS WERE never such underdogs as last night. In the Red Sox they were meeting a club with a 10-game winning streak. They were trying to beat Boston with Paul Calvert, who had lost his last 13 starts for the Nats.

Manager Joe McCarthy of the Sox got away from the heat of the pennant race yesterday with a 180-mile drive to Martinsburg, W. Va.; where he officiated at the unveiling of a monument to the late Hack Wilson.

Umpire Bill Grieve, whose decision in Yankee Stadium brought the hottest dispute of the year, was taking it on the lam in his Washington hotel yesterday—at least to the extent of answering no pages.

Before last night's game, though, Grieve unburdened himself to newsmen, declaring, "I called the play on Johnny Pesky at the plate the way it should be called, no matter what the pictures try to show."

Grieve pointed out that the published pictures didn't show the full sequence. "They didn't show what was happening between the time Houk was catching the ball and I was calling the decision."

SHIRLEY POVICH.

Vets Blamed For Skins' 38-7 Lacing

By Bill Burnett
Post Reporter

"Don't blame the new guys!"

The Washington Redskins' high command insisted on that point last night as the team arrived home and tried to explain away a 38-7 walloping by the Chicago Cardinals in Chicago Monday night.

Head Coach Billick Whelchel, after master-minding the first professional league game of his career, was apparently too dazed by the Trippi-Harder-Christman-Angsman runaway to talk much. Backfield Coach Wilbur Moore wanted to "wait and see the pictures."

But there was nothing reticent about Owner George Marshall, as usual. Through the purple haze of his anger he defended the 11 rookies among the Redskins with extraordinary heat:

"The kids played way over their heads, and you can't take it away from them," he almost howled. "It was the old guys—who you ought to be able to depend upon, who let us down miserably."

Marshall proceeded to name names.

Livingston Rapped

Halfback Howie Livingston, a pro for six years, made a sucker lunge at Charley Trippi to give the Cards their first touchdown. All Trippi had to do after catching a Christman pass was to wait while Livingston breezed past, then gallop across the goal on a 24-yard pass play.

Dick Poillon, usually the most dependable back on the Redskin squad, punted seven times and had a weak 30.7 yard average with several of his kicks going into the end zone.

Eddie Saenz, with four years of halfback experience behind him, made two errors that accounted for at least one touchdown. He walked away from a Trippi punt that rolled slowly toward the Redskin goal and was grounded, without a block by Saenz, by Center Bill Blackburn on the Redskin 1-yard line. After another bad punt by Poillon, the Cardinals broke a 7-7 tie with ease.

Later Saenz, with the whole Cardinal club bearing down on him, attempted to catch a punt without signalling for a fair catch. He fumbled and Bob Ravensburg recovered for the Cardinals on the Redskin 30.

Terps Figure —On Paper

Md., nearly went to Maryland. At the last minute, the 6-foot-4-inch passer decided to cast his lot with Georgetown.

Highly enthused over Coach Bob Margarita (he called him "best in the country") Mattingly said yesterday he wasn't sorry he changed his mind.

Lean Frank should be even a better quarterback Friday night.

Invalid Billy Conn's surprise comeback gives Georgetown that explosive runner who can go all the way. Then Dick Barba, unimpressive in practice, came back to be the second-leading groundgainer in the opener. Little Lou Miller, another Marylander from Catonsville, is a fiery groundgainer.

No question, it will be a ball game Friday night.

Md. Park Wins, 7 to 6

A 20-yard touchdown run by Tackle Ralph Morrow and a placement conversion by Bobby Thompson in the first quarter gave Maryland Park High a 7-6 victory over Mount Rainier last night before 2000 fans at College Park.

Morrow charged through midway in the first quarter to deflect a pass by Mount Rainier's Bob Sherrill. Morrow caught the ball in midair and raced 20 yards for the score. A Sherrill-to-Ken Moffett pass play covering 35 yards in the second quarter accounted for Mount Rainier's only score.

Touchdown Club Elects Lee Field

Lee Field, 40, last night was elected president of the Touchdown Club at the annual elections in the Hotel Statler. He succeeds Carroll D. Bird.

Jim Magner is the new vice president and Vee T. Curtis secretary-treasurer.

Elected to the board of governors were: Ralph Shaughnessy and Tom Whelan, Catholic University; Ed Daly, University of Maryland, and Charles Fenwick, University of Virginia, letter men, and James O'Connor Roberts, Francis Kelly and Charles Wilson, non-letter men.

Chest Drive Workers Given Idea of How Fund Money Is Put to Good Use

The people who are going to raise the money in the Community Chest campaign next month yesterday got a salesman's eye-view of where that money goes.

Seventy of the volunteer army of solicitors who hope to raise more than the $3,991,719 goal set for the campaign toured two Washington agencies which receive support from the Community Chest.

One was Children's Hospital, where 78 percent of the patients can't pay their full bills. They must fall back on the Hospital Service Agency, which acts as a central admitting office for local residents who need help with hospital costs.

Willard C. Smith, HSA administrator, explained his agency's place in the Washington hospital picture. He also told how members of the medical profession do not charge those who come to Washington hospitals as "Community Chest patients."

Then the volunteers toured the hospital itself. They heard the screams of some babies, saw others smiling cheerfully in their cribs. They watched 3-year-old Richard, patient in the cast which for three weeks has been mending his broken leg. He was injured in a traffic accident.

They peered in to see a blood transfusion given to a very small baby, saw another recovering from the ravages of eczema. They tiptoed by the glass enclosed ward in which two "blue babies" who had undergone the Blalock operation were recovering under oxygen tents.

To most, the hospital tour was an educational, but startling, experience.

Next, the group went to the Twelfth Street Branch of the YMCA, where Laurence F. Hunt, executive secretary of the branch, told them that that Y is the oldest in the country serving the Negro people, and that it also is one of Washington's oldest social agencies.

Hunt said the Y expects to get 47 percent of its budget from the Chest next year, will get 28 percent from dormitory payments, 14 percent from paid membership fees and 11 percent from other sources.

The Y has a membership of 1200 adults and 800 boys, but its services to adults are limited by the type of facilities it has to offer older men, Hunt said.

The tours will be continued through November 3. Chest officials say the response, while slow at first, has been steadily growing. Information on the tours may be had by calling Metropolitan 2284. They are conducted by bus, and are given from 2 to 5 p. m. and 7:30 to 9:45 p. m.

Arnold Bus Strike Set for November 2

Drivers to Go Out Then Unless Lines Begin Paying Raise

By Paul Herron
Post Reporter

Drivers and maintenance men of the Arnold bus lines voted unanimously last night to go on strike at 12:01 a. m. Wednesday, November 2, unless the company begins paying them a 10-cent hourly increase in wages by that date.

Union members met in two sessions yesterday at the Ballston Firehouse to take the vote.

At the end of last night's meeting the members sent a letter to Governor Tuck notifying him of their decision. Five weeks' notice is required under Virginia law.

The meetings yesterday were called by union officials after company representatives told them on Monday that revenues were too low to meet the increased payroll. The 10-cent increase was ordered by a board of arbitration September 9.

The board made the raise retroactive to May 18, the date of the expiration of the old contract.

The union, the AFL Amalgamated Association of Street Electric Railway and Motor Coach Employes of America, Division 1079, said in its letter to the Governor that unless the retroactive increase is paid in full by December 10, the union would walk out on 12:01 a. m. December 11.

Union Officer Against Strike

Frederick Fitzgerald, international vice president of the union, urged members against going out on strike last night. He warned that Virginia law required the five weeks' notice, and said a work stoppage without such notice would injure the union.

Monday the company told union representatives it could not meet the pay raise. Management representatives said they had filed petitions with the State and Inter-State Commerce Commissions for rate increases and would start paying the raises as soon as increases were permitted.

After 17 days of negotiations, the arbitration board recommended total wage increases of 17 cents an hour. The immediate increase, retroactive to May 18, was to be 10 cents, gradually rising to a total of 17 cents over three five-month periods.

Quonset Inn

Cafe Holdup Arrest Seen Momentarily

Arrest of a suspect in the $3400 holdup robbery at the Quonset Inn in Silver Hill, Md., early yesterday was expected momentarily last night by Prince Georges County police.

Police said they recognized the man from the description furnished them by Sam Fong, 28, manager of the nightclub at 3225 Naylor rd.

Three men entered the inn Monday midnight, Fong told police, played some of the six slot machines there to the tune of $150, and then pulled guns and fled with $3400.

Two of the men were sitting at the bar at closing time, Wong said. They were joined by a third man, described by Wong as tall and blond, just before the robbery.

Wong told Lieut. Elon Turner of the county police that the slot machines at the Quonset Inn were owned by a man in New York named Sam Leonard. Turner said Sam Leonard lived in Mt. Rainier.

Wong said a corporation composed of members of his family leased the Quonset Inn from its owner, Mike Meyers of Prince Georges County. Wong said he had no connection with gangland figures. The bandits took all the money in the nightclub, he said, except for the change in the slot machines.

GWU Coed Sues For $30,000 in Auto Accident

A 20-year-old George Washington University coed filed suit yesterday in District Court for $30,000 damages, charging that she suffered permanent mouth and teeth injuries in a traffic accident.

Miss Barbara Sorenson, a junior at GWU studying dramatics and speech correction sued through her father, Richard M. Sorenson, of Rockville Center, N. Y. Named as defendants were Mrs. Katherine E. Byron, of 1901 Wyoming ave. nw., former Maryland Congresswoman here, and her son, Goodloe Byron, 20, also a student at GWU.

Miss Sorenson charges she was injured in the accident occurring November 21, 1948, at Connecticut ave. and Fessenden st. nw. She said Goodloe drove the car when it jumped a curb, crashing into a fire hydrant and tree.

Transit Firm's New Owners Split on Radios

3 Oppose, 3 Favor Innovation Expected To Net $6 a Vehicle

By S. Oliver Goodman
Post Reporter

Even as you and I, the nine Florida owners of controlling interest in Capital Transit Co. are divided on the issue of radios in streetcars and buses.

Louis E. Wolfson, Cecil Wolfson and Doran S. Weinstein are in favor; Sam W. and Saul Wolfson and A. J. Rosenthal are opposed; J. A. B. Broadwater, Jack Surasky and E. B. Gerbert have "no opinion."

Their views were expressed yesterday afternoon at a "meet the press" luncheon in the Metropolitan Club attended by Capital Transit officials and representatives of the four local newspapers.

In answer to a question, E. Cleveland Giddings, vice president in charge of public relations for CTC, said the company expects to realize "a minimum of $6 per month per vehicle" through installation of transit radios. Giddings added that up to now 209 vehicles have been equipped with radio out of 1800 buses and streetcars.

Voice on Directorate Later

Asked if Capital Transit plans to increase its number of directors to give the Wolfson group a voice at board meetings, CTC President Edward D. Merrill pointed out that the charter permits only 15 members. L. E. Wolfson said his group is satisfied that present management is capable and will be content to wait "until the time presents itself" for electing new directors.

Five of the Wolfson group were here from Jacksonville, Fla., to met transit chieftains for the first time. The group bought a block of 109,458 shares of CTC stock earlier this month from North America Co. The purchase price was $2,189,160.

Wolfson disclosed yesterday that his group has purchased enough additional CTC shares to make its interest now "about 50 per cent." Originally, the group's block of CTC stock from North American Co. represented 46 per cent interest. Wolfson said the group would buy more shares "if the price is right."

Policies Up to Management

On questions whether the group had advanced any recommendations on labor policies, economies or service improvements, Wolfson declared "all such problems are in the hands of the management" and he saw no reason to interfere.

As the luncheon concluded, Wolfson emphasized the "flexibility" of the present CTC ownership. Unlike companies whose stock is widely scattered among thousands of shareholders, he pointed out, CTC is now in a position to act promptly on any problem which stockholders must decide. He also reiterated that "interests of minority stockholders will be protected at all times."

In addition to President Merrill and Vice President Giddings attending the luncheon were J. Edward Heberle, vice president and controller; William B. Bennett, vice president and secretary S. E. Emmons, general manager. Along with L. E. Wolfson were Broadwater, Surasky, E. B. Gerbert, Cecil Wolfson and their attorney, John J. Manning.

Senators Neely, Kefauver to Talk At 'Vote' Dinner

Two Senate District leaders are slated to speak at the November "votes for Washington" dinner being planned by the District Democratic Club.

Arthur Clarendon Smith, president of the club, said Senate District Chairman Matthew M. Neely (D., W. Va.) and Senator Estes Kefauver (D., Tenn.) sponsor of the Senate-approved home rule bill for Washington, have accepted invitations to speak.

Date and location of the dinner have not been set.

Senate Passes Bill Bolstering D. C. Parks Group Setup

The Senate yesterday approved and sent to the House a bill to rename, enlarge and strengthen the National Capital Park and Planning Commission in development of the Washington Metropolitan area.

The name would be the National Capital Planning Commission.

A civilian representative of the District Commissioners, a representative each from Maryland and Virginia, and the Architect of the Capitol, would be added to the Commission, and the representation of the Forest Service ended.

The bill calls upon Federal and District government agencies to use the Commission as the central planning agency in development of the Metropolitan area.

Mother in Custody Suit Wins Order Keeping Mate in Va.

Mrs. Robert Boal Wickes, who charges her husband is keeping their child from her illegally in Argentina, won the second round in her custody fight yesterday when Fairfax Circuit Court ordered Wickes to remain in Virginia until further notice.

She lost the first round last Friday. Then the court refused to issue a writ of habeas corpus to force the socially prominent Wickes to bring two-year-old Judy Alicia Wickes from Argentina to Fairfax.

The third and final round will be a hearing in the Fairfax Court later this fall at which Mrs. Wickes will ask alimony without divorce for herself and custody and support of Judy.

Mrs. Wickes, 25, obtained a writ last week to prevent Wickes, 45, from going back to Argentina—or anywhere outside the State. Her attorneys, Marion B. West of Alexandria and John A. Croghan of Washington, contended that if Wicke went back to Argentina it would be impossible to get him back for the alimony and custody case.

Wickes' attorney, J. Randall Caton of Alexandria sought to have the writ set aside yesterday on the grounds that the petition showed no precise debt owed Mrs. Wickes and that it failed to allege Wickes was planning to leave the country to avoid paying his debt.

Pretty, blonde Mrs. Wickes has not yet told her story on the witness stand. Her petition for a writ of habeas corpus, however, said she married Wickes in 1946 and that they moved to Buenos Aires soon after the birth of the child.

Last February, the petition said, Wickes attacked and beat her without cause and then forced her to leave Argentina without the child. Wickes is a member of a socially-prominent family owning Buenos Ayres Villa near Mount Vernon.

White House To Be Ready In Two Years

President Truman can look forward to being back in the White House by Christmas—1951.

He should also be able to celebrate Thanksgiving there, and perhaps even some of the earlier fall holidays of 1951, under present construction plans. The Trumans are now in Blair House on the other side of the street.

The plans were outlined yesterday to the House Public Works Committee by U. S. Public Buildings Commissioner W. E. Reynolds.

He said bids for the general renovation contract — total estimated cost $5,400,000—will be invited within the next 10 days. He said the invitations would be sent to qualified contractors among some 40 who answered preliminary questionnaires expressing an interest in the job.

He said actual construction will probably start early in December, with the scheduled completion date 22 months later.

Reynolds went to the committee to add his indorsement of legislation that would empower the Commission on Renovation of the Executive Mansion, to make a plan for disposing of the material to be removed from the White House, clear it with the President, and go ahead with it.

Maj. Gen. Glen E. Edgerton, U. S. Army Corps of Engineers, ret., executive secretary of the White House Commission, and General Services Administrator Jess Larson, also testified for the measure. Members indicated the committee will approve it.

Dead Man Found In Alexandria

The body of a 46-year-old man was found yesterday at the foot of S. Patrick st. in Alexandria near Hunting Creek.

Police said papers found on the body tentatively identified the body as that of Willie McCoy of Clarkton, N. C. He had been dead several days, they said. Dr. John A. Sims, city coroner, was conducting an investigation into the cause of death.

Heat Waves Here Cost 3.5 Millions

Washington's summer heat cost the Federal Government $3,500,000 this year, the House Public Works Committee was told yesterday.

Public Buildings Commissioner W. E. Reynolds made the estimate, during testimony on a bill to revise the law on installation of air conditioning equipment in Government laboratories. It would permit charging the cost to the appropriation of the agency using the equipment, but the General Services Administration would maintain and operate it.

Reynolds told the committee the cost of this year's Washington heat wave included: (1) loss of 900,000 man-days of Government employe time through early dismissal on hot days, and (2) drop in efficiency of workers in nonair-conditioned buildings before dismissal.

He said the estimates were based on an informal survey he made.

Engine Fumes Result in $90,000 Damages Suit

Engine carbon monoxide fumes which allegedly filled an automobile and overcame the driver resulted in a $90,000 damage suit yesterday in District Court.

The suit was filed by Ralph Q. Butler, his wife, Mildred, and their two children, formerly of Takoma Park, Md., and now residing in Ferndale, Mich. Defendants are the General Motors Corp., and J. H. Satcher, an auto dealer here from whom the Butler vehicle was purchased.

The plaintiffs say that in October, 1947, the car they had purchased filled with fumes from the engine, and Butler, who was driving, became unconscious. The car struck a highway pole near Bethesda, Md.

Mrs. Butler was most seriously injured with a fractured skull. The others were injured less seriously but painfully, according to the suit. Their attorneys are Milton Kaplan and Henry Fowler.

Young Mother Begs for Son She Gave Away

Judge Goldsborough Reserves Decision Pending Investigation

A 26-year-old waitress pleaded with United States District Judge Goldsborough yesterday for her 3-year-old son who has been in the care of another woman since shortly after his birth.

The mother is Mrs. Mary Miller, 6123 Parkwood rd., Landover, Md. The son is Jonathon, now being cared for by Mrs. Floyd Little, of 1317 10th st. nw.

Mrs. Miller said that when she was about to give birth to Jonathon she was destitute, frightened and gave him up, thinking he would have a better home with Mrs. Little. Mrs. Miller denied that the boy was illegitimate, saying that the father was her husband at the time. She has since remarried.

Mrs. Miller is tiny, brunette and big eyed.

"When you don't have any money, there is nothing you can do but give the child away to someone who would give it a good home. I was scared. I had never had a baby before, and I don't know what I thought of," she said in response to questions of her lawyer, John Bonner.

She criticized Mrs. Little's housekeeping and blamed Jonathon's "crippled" arm on the woman not giving the boy proper care. Mrs. Miller said the Littles had Jonathon registered in their name by falsifying statements at Gallinger Hospital when the boy was born.

Through Attorney Jeff Busby, Mrs. Little denied any wrongdoing and asserted that Mrs. Miller claimed the child was illegitimate and unwanted.

Judge Goldsborough decided to continue the case until October 24, to allow Mrs. Little to keep him in the meantime, and to have the Domestic Relations Commissioner investigate the case.

"There is nothing more difficult than a case like this, with the welfare of a three-year-old child involved," commented the jurist.

Man Gets $337.15 For Car Damaged By Fire Truck

The Senate yesterday approved and sent to the President a bill to pay $337.15 to Jack Phillips, 1600 16th st. se., for damage to his car when it was hit by a District fire truck January 23, 1948.

The car was struck while parked on 14th st. se. between Good Hope rd. and U st. se. The fire truck answering an alarm, skidded into the car and knocked it some 40 feet.

The Commissioners had turned down the claim for damages on the ground that the fire truck was performing a governmental function, and they also opposed the bill.

Senate Passes Bill Aiding Teachers

Unfair Pay Rates Adjusted, Raises Made Retroactive

The Senate yesterday voted a retroactive pay increase for about 110 District public school teachers.

To about 90 percent of the group, the action spells back pay checks up to $600. The others will receive amounts up to $1000.

The decision was made with unanimous consent approval of a bill to adjust salary inequities created by the teachers' pay act of 1947, and the measure is retroactive to July 1 of that year.

Senate approval sent the measure to the White House, and wrote "the end" to a unique legislative mixup. Last year the House passed the same bill, its own, and the Senate passed an identical bill, its own, and the matter was left there, since it takes action of both Houses on a single bill to prepare it for the President's signature.

Unfairness Is Corrected

The main inequity adjusted by the bill is a feature of the 1947 salary law that left veteran District teachers with master's degrees drawing lower pay than those newly hired with the same degree.

When the law took effect, some teachers here landed in a salary bracket between $3000 and $3500. Teachers with master's degrees hired after the 1947 law went on the books started at a $3500 salary, provided they had five years teaching experience.

The bill boosts to $3500 as of July 1, 1947, those teachers who had been serving with master's degrees in the District public school system, and whose salaries then were below that mark. They get the increase both for the past two years, and for this and future years.

Change In Credits

Another effect of the bill, school officials said, is to authorize a change in the method of crediting prior teaching experience for newly hired master's degree teachers. Up to now, a teacher who had just obtained a master's degree, and had five years previous teaching experience without that degree, would be hired at the $3500 figure. The change would credit the teacher with master's degree experience only for those teaching years in which he had the degree.

The bill also gives the Board of Education authority to even up the work load of elementary school principals. The legal formula up until now has been a principal for 16 classrooms; school officials feel the assignment of principals should be based instead on the number of pupils and teachers. Officials said the same number of principals will be used, with a more even division of the work.

School officials estimated the cost of the bill at about $22,000 for each fiscal year.

'Sandman' Given Stay By Court

By Howard L. Dutkin
Post Reporter

The WINX disc jockey program, "The Sandman" starring Les Sand now comes to you through the courtesy of the United States District Court, dispensers of justice for 86 years.

A restraining order issued by Federal Judge T. Alan Goldsborough temporarily has blocked the discharge of Sand by his employers, Banks Independent Broadcasting Co., Inc., owners of WINX, it was learned yesterday.

A hearing on a plea for a temporary injunction in the case is slated for District Court Thursday.

According to the complaint filed by Attorney Philip Shinberg naming as defendants the corporation, William A. and Dolly R. Banks, officers, Sand was hired by oral contract last May, to take over "The Sandman" program.

The complaint charged that because of Sand's "unusual talents and abilities" the number of advertisers for the show was built up from less than 30 to about 100.

Early this month, the complaint stated, Sand received a letter from Dolly R. Banks saying that because the program "is feasibly uneconomical . . . we find ourselves obligated to dispense with your valuable services . . . the week ending September 24, 1949."

The complaint charged that the economy reason was subterfuge veiling the real reason which, it was alleged, was a desire to divert potential advertisers to other programs and to use regular announcers at lower cost.

It was charged, in the complaint, that "money damages cannot compensate" Sand "for the injury to his professional career in the years to come."

The complaint asked that the discharge notice be voided and that the corporation be temporarily and permanently restrained from discharging Sand or interferring with him in the broadcast of the program.

As an alternative $100,000 damages were asked.

Legal authorities have cited many cases in which an employer of a talented person has sued to force the employe to continue to perform his contracted duties but the instances of an employe suing to retain his job are few.

D. C. Coroner Checking Death Of Rinehart, Insurance Man

The death of William H. Rinehart, 53-year-old insurance executive, early yesterday is being investigated by Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald.

Rinehart was found in an unconscious condition shortly before midnight Monday in bed at his home, 646 I st. sw., by his daughter, Mary, 21.

A Health Department ambulance was sent to the address and Rinehart was pronounced dead at 12:16 a. m.

Police said there was evidence Rinehart had taken sleeping pills after returning home at about 11:30 p. m. His family said he had been under a doctor's care for a heart ailment and he took the sleeping pills nightly under the doctor's instructions.

Dr. MacDonald said he was withholding a death certificate pending a chemical analysis of vital organs.

Rinehart was district manager for the Mutual Life Insurance Association of Richmond, Va., which has offices in the Albee Building, 15th and G sts. nw.

In addition to his daughter, Mary, Rinehart is survived by his wife, Mary; a son, William H., jr., who is Mary's twin, and three other daughters, Joan, 14, Vera, 29, and Geneva, 27, all of Washington.

Rinehart was a member of the Holy Name Society of St. Dominic's Church.

Lane Names Judge During Bar Dinner

School Moves Desks to End Fire Hazard

Rearranged furniture in classrooms at Slowe Elementary School has overcome a fire hazard, some 150 members of the P-TA were told last night.

Mrs. Alice Elam, divisional director of nine Negro elementary schools, of which Slowe is one, reported that desks have been changed in every room. Sufficient aisle space has resulted, she said, to permit each child to reach the door in an emergency.

The P-TA met last night to hear a report by its education-recreation committee on a conference the group held Monday with District school officials.

Dr. Frank M. Snowden, jr., Howard University professor and head of the committee, said Superintendent of Schools Dr. Hobart M. Corning "promised to exert his every effort to finish the school in 1950."

Last Friday, about 70 percent of the 228 pupils at Slowe School were withdrawn by their parents on grounds that overcrowding in classrooms created a fire hazard. All were back in school Monday.

Maryland's Gov. William Lane, jr., last night obliged petitioners at a Montgomery County Bar Association dinner by giving a stop-gap, one-year Circuit Court appointment to Chief Circuit Court Judge Charles W. Woodford.

The occasion was the bar association's annual diner at the Congressional Country Club.

During the dinner, a petition of the Montgomery County and Frederick Bar Associations requesting Judge Woodford's appointment was handed Governor Lane and he made the appointment on the spot.

The unusual situation was necessitated because the term of Judge Woodford, who was appointed ti a 15-year term in 1934, will expire this year and new elections will not be held until 1950.

Governor Lane, in his speech at the dinner, reaffirmed the position he had taken on the State's sales tax and termed criticism of the levy "unjustifiable."

He indicated he is not afraid of the sales tax as an issue in the 1950 political campaign and in effect took up the challenge of Republican Party leaders who last week declared the Republican nominee for Governor must be a man who will take a strong stand against the sales tax.

He said the "wonder-working" pennies spelled the difference between "bumbling" along and doing nothing, and an efficient State government.

Miss Vivian V. Simpson of 241 Park ave., Takoma Park, Md., was installed as the first woman president of the Montgomery County Bar Association during the dinner.

Montgomery County Circuit Court Judge Stedman Prescott was the toastmaster and Frank Markell, member of the Maryland Court of Appeals, introduced the officers.

More than 125 members of the two bar associations attended the dinner.

At the dinner, Governor Lane evaded a direct question as to whether he will seek reelection in 1950. When asked the question by a reporter pointblank, he replied: "All I can do is to keep from running out."

He refused to elaborate.

Commissioners Name Five New Policemen

District Commissioners, acting on the recommendation of Police Supt. Robert J. Barrett, yesterday appointed five men as privates, Class I, on the police force at an annual salary of $3077.

Henry H. Sasscer Dies at 84; Prince Georges Party Figure

Henry H. Sasscer, jr., 84, formerly among the largest landowners in southern Maryland, and one of the organizers of the Prince Georges County Democratic machine, died yesterday at his Bradenton, Fla., home after a brief illness.

Mr. Sasscer was a long-time friend and distant relative of Representative Lansdale G. Sasscer (D., Md.), leader of the Prince Georges County Democrats.

$25,000 Drive

Fund Raised For Hospital In Arlington

Arlington Hospital's $25,000 building fund drive is over the top by more than $700, John J. Anderson, hospital administrator, reported yesterday.

A total of $25,706 has been received in cash and pledges, with some campaign workers' reports still out, Anderson said.

All funds in excess of this year's goal will go towards the next installment due the Federal Government on the hospital building, he stated.

The $25,000 was needed for an initial down payment on the building, which the Government has offered hospital trustees for $125,000. Balance is to be paid over a five-year period at 3 per cent interest.

The building was constructed in 1944 with $661,000 in Lanham Act funds. Chairman of the funds campaign which opened August 20, was Jack R. Jones, Arlington real estate man.

Clinical Center Plans Are Described Here

Planning of the new 40-million-dollar Clinical Center of the National Institute of Health, Bethesda, Md., has now reached the "patients' comfort" stage, Washington Civitans were told yesterday.

These include recreational and spiritual facilities as well as the latest types of hospital furnishings, said Albert F. Siepert, executive officer of NIH, the research arm of the United States Public Health Service.

Two special hospital beds under consideration are a motor-driven elevating type and a lightweight metal bed with airplane-type landing wheels, Siepert disclosed. He spoke at a weekly luncheon session of the Civitan Club of Washington, at the Hotel Mayflower.

Special consideration of patient comfort must be given, he explained, because the chronically ill under treatment and study may be hospitalized for months at the center, instead of for weeks as in the average general hospital.

For spiritual needs, Siepert said, a chapel is incorporated in the building plans. Its rotating stage provides altars for Catholic, Protestant and Jewish services. Another assembly hall with stage will be equipped for recreational therapy for the many ambulatory patients expected to be studied at the 500-bed, research-treatment Center.

The center, now under construction, is expected to begin admitting patients by July, 1952.

Council Vote Plan Held Up In Alexandria

The Alexandria City Council last night held up for further study a request from its charter commission for a referendum on non-partisan election of councilmen.

The commission, which is revising the city's charter, recommended an advisory referendum which would let the council know, without binding it, how the voters feel about eliminating the party primary in council elections.

A council committee will meet with the charter commission tonight to go into the question.

In other action the council:

1. Agreed to sign a contract with Alexandria Hospital under which it would pay $14.96 a day for welfare patients, instead of the current $13.70 rate. The contract would extend to March 31, 1950, but would be retroactive only to September 1, 1949, instead of April 1, 1949, as the hospital had requested.

2. Adopted a policy of street development whereby all real estate developers will pay full cost of building sidewalks and curbs and gutters in new subdivisions, and will share with the city the cost of surfacing dedicated streets. A dedicated street is land designated as a public way. In the past the city had had no fixed policy as to how costs should be apportioned.

Health Scheme Weakens Care, AMA Declares

An American Medical Association official yesterday charged that compulsory health insurance is "political distribution of the health services," and would place Federal Government bureaucrats in the sick rooms and hospitals of the Nation.

"The bulk of physicians' time under such a scheme is always monopolized by the hypochondriacs rather than by those really sick," said Dr. Joseph Lawrence, director of the A. M. A.'s Washington office in an address before the Press Section of National Fraternal Congress at the Statler Hotel.

Anywhere it has been tried, compulsory health insurance has resulted in the deterioration of the quality of medical care, Dr. Lawrence said.

Another speaker before the Congress, reported that the majority of the English people and many doctors and dentists liked the British plan.

Speaking before the congress' Presidents' Section, Tom G. Robertson, president of the Independent Order of Foresters, Toronto, Canada, said a recent trip to England convinced him that compulsory health insurance will stick in England, although it may have to be modified to "meet Britain's economic quandary."

Robertson expressed the belief that no such plan could succeed without the support of the whole medical profession.

The congress will go into general session at 9:30 a. m. today. Ralph Bradford, executive vice president of the United States Chamber of Commerce, will speak on "Let's Make America Safe."

30 Arlington Pupils Going To Manassas

The Arlington school board last night took steps to send from 30 to 50 high school students to Virginia's regional vocational school at Manassas, which has facilities for both Negroes and whites.

The board acted after indorsements of the proposal by County School Superintendent William Early and Arlington County Court Justice Hugh Reid at the board meeting in Washington-Lee High School.

Early cited overcrowding in shop courses at Washington-Lee, Claude Swanson, Dolly Madison and Thomas Jefferson schools. He said courses in radio, air conditioning, refrigeration, electricity and welding are available at the regional school and are not part of the county curriculum.

Justice Reid urged the vocational facilities to prevent delinquency in cases where youngsters are suffering from "a definite school maladjustment."

The board authorized Early to determine the exact number of high school youngsters who would attend the state-operated school, and said if the number was "sufficient," it would purchase a bus for transportation, and would contribute the required $125 annual tuition per youngster.

Early estimated that from 30 to 50 Arlington students would want to attend the regional school.

In other action, the board:

1. Authorized condemnation of about six acres of the seven-acre site proposed for the new Hume School at 24th st. and S. Ode st. in Arlington.

2. Authorized payment of tuition to the District for several hard-of-hearing youngsters attending the District's school for handicapped children, before the opening of a special class for hard-of-hearing in Arlington next February.

3. Authorized expenditure of $9608 for installation of nine large tables in a multi-purpose room at Kate Waller Barrett School, plus structural changes necessary in the school.

4. Authorized execution of a contract for construction of the North Fairlington Elementary School, which was awarded about a month ago to M. Pomponio & Sons. The technical difficulties in transfer of the deed held up the start of construction.

5. Heard a request by T. R. Gilbert, president of the Shirley School P-TA, that a nursery kindergarten in the Shirley Homes Project be taken over for school use to relieve overcrowding in the school.

Tedder Tour's Mad Whirl Alow and Aloft; American Market Tough for Europe

By Mary Van Rensselaer Thayer

THOSE who pleasured themselves in prewar Paris remember magnetic Ted Rousseau, Banker's Trust representative and longtime impresario of the American Club.

Well, next Sunday M. Rousseau's son-in-law Giovanni Bagarotti will be guest soloist at the National Gallery of Art concert, playing two violin concertos, Haydn's First and Mozart's Third with the gallery's thirty piece orchestra. The maestro's wife is the former Marta Rousseau, a real beauty and an accomplished musician in her own right, who often officiates as her husband's accompanist.

The Rousseau family still continue to lead interesting lives—Ted, jr., is one of the youngest curators of New York's Metropolitan Museum and is developing new, distinctly unorthodox ways of hanging paintings—working with lights, pigments and so on.

The senior Rousseaus—Mrs. Rousseau is Romanian-born, was first married to Prince de Broglie—are ensconced again in Paris. Their house on the Avenue Foch once belonged to Dr. Evans, Empress Eugenie's American dentist who not only took care of her beautiful teeth but was instrumental in arranging the Empress' escape to England. The Second Empire house is described wittily by Mme. Rousseau—as "half dentist, half royal palace."

Here's an example of what Europe's up against trying to boost exports to this country. Recently former OPA head Paul Porter returned from Europe with an exceedingly nifty lighter someone had given him. It's filled with butane and lights no less than 2000 times—and besides the case is beautifully worked. He showed off the new possession to France's Finance Minister Maurice Petsche, saying it would make an ideal French export, sell like hotcakes over here. M. Petsche, who estimated the lighter's cost at around fifty dollars, shrugged his shoulders. What would be the use? he said. "Before you know it, that lighter will be for sale in your five-and-tens. It would be impossible for us to produce it cheap enough to compete with you."

Marshal of the Royal Airforce, the Lord Tedder, and Lady Tedder will return to Washington Monday. The Tedders are here on invitation of General Hoyt S. Vandengerg to make an inspection tour of Air Force installations. Then they'll move on to Canada.

During their three-week stay the Tedders have covered a lot of ground, whizzed through a lot of air. The Vandenbergs and the Spaatzes have entertained for them, so has the Chief of the British Air Mission, Sir Charles Medhurst and Lady Medhurst. Lord Tedder is to inspect West Point and on Saturday go to a Columbia football game with the university's President and Mrs. Eisenhower, then attend a dinner given in their honor. The Tedders will have to undergo another round of meeting people before taking off North.

How to Make Turkey Burgoo

HEAVEN fend us from muscling in on Lucia Brown's territory and dishing out recipes, but so many have asked how to make Turkey Burgoo that in self-defense, here it is—for 50 people.

1 lb. cubed salt pork
12 potatoes, peeled and diced
6 large onions, sliced
6 cups shelled lima beans
6 cups shredded cabbage
6 cups diced carrots
6 cups corn
2 pecks of fresh tomatoes

The turkeys are boiled with celery, onion and bay leaves. The ensuing broth is used to cook the above vegetables. The turkeys are cut up in small pieces and simmered with the vegetables. Thickening may be used if it turns out too watery.

Turkey Burgoo, incidentally, is the same as Brunswick stew—but it sounds more intriguing. Remember the Brunswick stew Mrs. Kenneth Royall used to serve when she was entertaining in a big way? There you are. It's remarkable how many Washingtonians seem intent on inviting 50 or more people in for a meal.

Tuman Calls Fair Deal Foes 160 Years Behind the Times whom he accuses of using "scare words."

It was the President's first public utterance since he announced last week that an "atomic explosion" had occurred in Russia. He made no mention of this momentous development.

He is to speak again Thursday night in Kansas City, Mo., at a dinner in honor of William M. (Bill) Boyle, new chairman of the Democratic National Committee. The speech will be extemporaneous, and is scheduled for 10:30 p. m., Washington time.

Listening-In Gatherings

Mr. Truman was introduced to listening-in gatherings of women yesterday by Mrs. India Edwards, executive director of the Women's Division of the Democratic National Committee.

At the outset he paid a compliment to American women by saying that their interest in the affairs of Government goes far beyond job holding or partisanship.

"I know that women are not misled by political slogans," he said. "They have learned that the real issues in poliitcal activity are the well-being of the country and the future of their families. Women look beneath the labels to see the facts."

Praises Party Program

He declared that the Democratic Party offers more for the welfare of the country—and therefore more for the women of the country—than any other party or political group. The party, he said, has a program.

"It is a program of practical measures," Mr. Truman continued. "It is not a blueprint imposed from on high by a little group of theorists. Neither is it a set of platitudes concocted by a group of corporation lawyers in a smoke-filled room. Our program is an expression of the desires of the people. . . .

"Up From Grass Roots"

"Our program consists of measures which have come up from the grass roots—of ideas and proposals that have been discussed and hammered out among unions, in farm groups, in city councils, in county boards and in State Legislatures. Our program is as American as the soil we walk on."

All groups in the Nation, he said, depend on one another. Farmers cannot be prosperous, he continued, unless industrial workers have steady employment and good wages; workers cannot be prosperous unless farmers are able to buy the things that workers make, and businessmen cannot be prosperous unless both farmers and workers have the money to buy the things they sell.

"That i swhat the term 'general welfare' means," the Chief Executive said. "The general welfare is the sum total of the welfare of all the groups in our country."

After saying that the Democratic Party is determined to carry out its constitutional responsibility, Mr. Truman said that modern methods were needed to solve modern problems.

Keep U. S. Prosperous

"Above all else," he said, "we want to keep the United States prosperous and strong because we know that our prosperity is the best guarantee of peace. Every measure to promote the general welfare in this country is a measure to promote peace in the world."

He said that the Democratic Party's program for housing, aid to education and aid to agriculture could not be made effective without the united efforts of American citizens.

Mr. Truman continued:

"I ask you to bear that in mind when you hear people saying that measures for the general welfare are merely Federal handouts to the shiftless or the incompetent. I ask you to bear it in mind when you hear our opponents saying that our program is undermining local government and the moral character of our citizens.

"The facts are just the opposite. Our program increases opportunity and incentive among our citizens. It increases the responsibilities and activities of local government."

Besides Mrs. Edwards, three women were at the White House to meet the President and take part in the broadcast. They were Mrs. Elsie West of Lothian, Md., a widow who operates a farm; Mrs. Albert C. Hulihan of Slippery Rock, Pa., wife of a former coal miner, now with a building supply company, and Mrs. George London of Raleigh, N. C., wife of a small businessman.

Mrs .West, in her talk, said that it took the Federal Government to end the depression. She said she hoped the Government would never again "permit farm prices to fall through the floor as they did in the twenties."

Leaving for St. Louis

President Truman is to take off for St. Louis at 7:30 o'clock this evening. His own plane, the Independence, is undergoing a regular checkup at the Douglas plant in California, so he will make the trip in an Air Force Constellation called "Dew-Drop."

Mr. Truman will spend the night in the Sheraton Hotel in St. Louis. Next morning he will install officers of the Missouri Grand Lodge in the Masonic Temple. At 2 p.m. he will take off on a one-hour flight to Kansas City. He will rest prior to attending the testimonial dinner to Chairman Boyle.

The President is scheduled to start the return trip to Washington on Friday at 3 p.m., and is expected to arrive here about 6:15 p.m.

German Women Fear Reprisals In Politics, Clubwoman Reports

By Genevieve Reynolds

MANY German women are reluctant to participate in politics; they fear reprisals when the parties change. This is the observation of Mrs. Robert F. Leonard past president of the D. C. League of Women Voters.

Mrs. Leonard, who recently returned from a tour of Germany, gave her impressions of the women in "New Germany" at a luncheon meeting of the D. C. League yesterday at the YWCA.

Fear of mixing in public affairs is especially predominant among former Nazi women's groups, she told the audience. Also, German women have very little time to give to public affairs. Mrs. Leonard pointed out that in some places five families have to take turns on one stove, cooking meals in shifts.

Mrs. Leonard believes it is essential to convince German women that they can spare a few hours each week for participation in public affairs.

As a whole they realize the importance of assuming more responsibility in public affairs. (They hate the word politics.) They know if they don't they will have no part in the new government.

Mrs. Leonard also reported that Germany's statute books are being given a strenuous going over now to conform with the new constitution that takes effect in 1953. For instance, the new constitution places women on equal footing with men, gives them equal rights. But Germany's present laws are worded to apply to "women, adults and children."

Mrs. Leonard heard speeches made by 11 young German women on their return from a trip to this country. They told their sisters that American women cook on electric stoves, get all their work done within an hour or so and spend the rest of their time shopping. The reaction of the German women was: That's wonderful. But it'd never work here.

Mrs. Leonard cautioned League members never to show visitors from other countries only the best, because that only deepens the gap between them and us.

Visitors Now Candidates

Two of the seven women brought from Germany by the National League of Women Voters through the Carrie Chapman Catt Fund have been elected to the German legislature, according to Mrs. Leonard. And one of them, she said, is campaigning now to make public the hearings on pending legislation, as is done in this country.

Also included in yesterday's program was a skit, "Shades of the Past and Present," depicting the fight for women's suffrage. Mrs. Sydney Ross directed the drama and the cast included Mrs. Marcus Mensh, Mrs. Alexander Guyol, Mrs. A. Harry Becker and Mrs. John A. Auchincloss.

Club Founders Celebrate

BACK in 1919 five women journalists banded together and founded the Women's National Press Club. Four of those founders—Mrs. Sam (Carolyn) Bell, Mrs. Harold Phelps Stokes, Mrs. Florence Brewer Boeckel and Miss Eleanor King—were present to celebrate the club's thirtieth birthday anniversary yesterday. The gala tea was held at the United Nations' Club for members only.

Miss Jane Stafford, president, in a welcoming speech proposed a campaign to establish a clubhouse.

Tea for Sarah Churchill

MULTITALENTED Miss Sarah Churchill, daughter of former Prime Minister Winston Churchill, will be guest of honor at the American Newspaper Women's Club's tea at 4:30 p. m. at the clubhouse. Miss Churchill is appearing in "The Philadelphia Story" at the Olney Theater this week.

3 Service Dances Scheduled Tonight

Mrs. Mary Kolb, recreation director of Andrews Air Force Base, has invited members of the District National Guard and personnel of Bolling Field and guests to a harvest moon dance this evening at 8 o'clock.

Invitations to another harvest moon dance at the same hour this evening have been issued by Miss Lillian Hunt, recreation director of North Post, Fort Myer. Lieut. C. F. Christener, recreation officer of Navy Barracks, Quarters I, will be host at a dance this evening at 10 o'clock.

Mrs. Cafritz Gives Gala Party To Wish Morris 'Happy Birthday'

By Elizabeth Maguire

"HAPPY BIRTHDAY, dear Morris," rang out yesterday at the Cafritz house to the strains of a strolling guitar player. Over 100 guests sang the traditional greeting to the surprised host, whose wife thoughtfully provided a giant cake to go with the music.

Mrs. Cafritz was gowned by Lanvin in Navy taffeta, and around her throat sparkled a diamond and turquoise necklace. "The diamond necklace?" asked a friend. "One of them," was the reply. And when Mr. Cafritz was asked what he got for his birthday, he just as happily replied "a comb."

Hats drew more comments than atoms. Mrs. Mitchell Palmer wore one glowing with red roses, and Mme. Bonnet, wife of the French Ambassador, a brown beanie circled with a flock of tiny white feathered birds. Mrs. Rahel Fitch looked lovely in a black velvet confection with slanting wide brim, and perhaps the prettiest hat of all, a tower of white plumes, adorned Miss Rose Saul, who has just returned from Europe.

Tells Impressions

IN England and on the Continent Miss Saul saw the best dressed women at the Ritz in London, the cleanest towns in Portugal, and the most wonderful shops in Rome. Marvin Coles said he had vacationed at Newport. He had had a letter recently from Mrs. Perle Mesta, U. S. Minister to Luxembourg, who said she was enjoying her new post greatly.

Mrs. Rosa Ponselle was in yesterday's gathering, costumed in becoming brown. Her teacher, Romano Romani, she said, has taken on a new pupil, Miss Gery Clifford, whose parents, Mr. and Mrs. Clark Clifford were also at the Cafritz party.

The Ambassador of Cuba, Dr. Oscar Gans, was there, just back from his 14th trip to Cuba in five months. He squired Senora de Gans who enjoyed a chat with Mrs. Tom Hagan and the Spanish agricultural attache and beautiful Senora de Echegaray.

Vice President Attends

OTHERS in the gala gathering were Vice President Barkley, Gen. and Mrs. Hoyt Vandenberg, Col. and Mrs. M. Robert Guggenheim, Drew Dudley, Col. and Mrs. Curt C. Schiffeler, Mrs. Charles Carroll Glover, jr., Mrs. Max Truitt, Mr. and Mrs. Robert E. Schenck, Jack Logan, Mrs. Kenneth Royall, Mrs. William Mann, Mrs. John Steelman, and Judge and Mrs. Clarence Norton Goodwin.

There was much interest when the Vice-President arrived. He gave a cordial greeting to the host and hostess, and made a tour of the crowded drawing room, stopping here and there for a chat. He and the Norwegian Ambassador, Wilhelm Munthe de Morgenstierne, had a cocktail together while they were serenaded by the "St. Louis Blues."

MRS. GEORGE C. McGHEE, wife of the Assistant Secretary of State, the Rani Shanker, wife of the Minister of Nepal, and the Maharani of Ratlam, daughter of the Minister, chat at the cocktail party at the Carlton yesterday. The Assistant Secretary of State for Near Eastern and African Affairs and Mrs. McGhee were hosts at the party for the new Minister of Nepal and the Rani Shanker

Mrs. Simpson's Betrothal to Peer Announced Here

MRS. CLARK McIlwaine of Washington announces the engagement of her daughter, Mrs. Pierce Simpson, to the Marquess of Milford Haven, O. B. E. D. S. C. The bride-elect is the former Miss Romaine Dahlgren Pierce, daughter of Mrs. McIlwaine and the late Vinton Ulric Dahlgren Pierce of Washington.

The Marquess of Milford Haven, whose full name is David Michael Mountbatten, is the son of the late George Louis Victor Henry Sergius, second Marquess of Milford Haven, G.C.V.O., Captain in the Royal Navy, and Countess Nadejda de Torby, younger daughter of H.I.H. the late Grand Duke Michael Michaelovitch of Russia, and the late Countess Torby. The present Marquess succeeded his father as third Marquess in 1938.

He is a great-great-grandson of Queen Victoria of England, and a cousin of Princess Elizabeth and Princess Margaret Rose. In November 1947 he was best man at the wedding of Princess Elizabeth and Philip, Duke of Edinburgh.

DUE to her father's early death and her mother's remarriage to Robert F. Herrick, jr., Mrs. Simpson was brought up in Boston where she was a member of the Vincent Club and Junior League, and where she went to the Beaver Country Day School. She later went to Foxcroft School in Middleburg, Va., and also to Barmore College in New York City to take a special course.

On her mother's side, Mrs. Simpson is descended from sixteenth-century William Cary, Mayor of Bristol, England, and his son and grandson, Col. Miles Cary I and Col. Miles Cary II, officials in many capacities in Colonial Virginia. She is also descended from Robert "King" Carter, King's Treasurer of Virginia under four sovereigns, and from Robert Nicholas, Capt. Thomas Taylor, Col. William Wilson and Dr. George Nicholas, all prominent in the government of Virginia. Gen. William Clark of the Lewis and Clark Expedition was her great-great-grandfather, and his brother, Gen George Rogers Clark, was her uncle.

On her father's side, Mrs. Simpson is the great-granddaughter of Admiral John Dahlgren, whose ancestors were born at Dahlen in Sweden. The great hall at Annapolis is named after this admiral, as were also a U. S. destroyer and a town in Virginia.

To Be Welcomed

North is North and South is South but often the two link hands. Such is the case of Canadian-born Senora de Pocaterra, wife of the new Venezuelan Ambassador. The comely Senora will be welcomed to the city at a tea given in her honor, Sunday, October 2. Hosts at the event will be members of the Canadian Club of Washington.

As a matter of fact there are several South of the Border and Northern combinations in the organization. There's Canadian born Mrs. Thomas Cajigas married to a Puerto Rican, who will serve as general chairman of the tea. Then there's the Cajigas daughter, Anita, married to Canada's C. George Mattusch.

New Hat Shops Bloom Along Connecticut Ave. With Autumn's Advent

By Peggy Preston

THE steady march of smart little shops along Connecticut ave has increased in tempo with the coming of the fall season.

A half dozen or more new establishments have opened their doors in recent weeks. All of which gives added credence to the theory of a loquacious cabby who informed me: 'Mark my word, Connecticut ave. is the coming F st. of Washington.

Maybe it is just that window shopping for fall bonnets is such an entrancing occupation, but the new hat shops seem especially fetching to us. On a recent stroll we wandered into several charming little places, all dedicated to the proposition that a woman wants a hat, even though she can't afford a new fall outfit.

Beginning at the Wardman Park, and walking toward town, we stopped first at 2653 Connecticut, where Elies has just opened a new shop. Formerly established in Bethesda, Elies moved to the avenue late in August, and is carrying on her custom-made millinery business in larger, more conveniently located quarters.

Switched From Frocks

A NEW YORKER by birth, Elies began her career in that city as a dress designer with Bergdorf Goodman's. Later she turned her talents to whipping up original hats, and set up shop in nearby Maryland.

Considerably further down, between R and Q streets, French designer Mme. Chautemps was discovered at a new address, a few doors down from her old one. Her new shop is one flight up, and thus is removed a bit from the dust and clatter of that battered section of the avenue where work on the underpass continues.

Much of the furnishings and decor of the former establishment are found in the new one. A pale green carpet covers the floor and the familiar yellow armchairs are still scattered around the salon. Chartreuse and deeper green shades are used as the central color scheme.

Oasis of Quiet

MME. CHAUTEMPS, who creates hats for many members of official society, believes her customers will find her new shop more inviting that the former one. "It is less noisy," she explained, with a glance toward the torn-up avenue.

Miss Raye Harris, designer, and manager of the new hat shop "Davanne," greeted us at 1319 Connecticut ave. Although this shop was launched during the summer, its official opening did not take place until this month. In the spacious salon, with modern decor, may be found any number of famous "name" hats, as well as custom made models.

Miss Harris informed us that she has been a resident of Washington for about three years. Prior to that time she operated several small shops on New York's Madison ave.

Famous Designers in Show

GOWNS by several outstanding designers highlighted the fashion show and lecture that was a feature of yesterday's tea given by the Henrietta Szold Group of Hadassah. The event, which opened the group's membership drive, took place at the home of Mrs. Abe Blajwas.

Mrs. Ruey Messenger, fashion coordinator for Julius Garfinckel & Co., conducted the style review, giving a commentary on the season's outstanding trends in silhouette, fabrics, etc. Illustrating each point was a collection of costumes by Adrian, Christian Dior, Hattie Carnegie, Ben Reig, Ceil Chapman and other noted designers.

More than 200 members and guests attended the affair. The welcoming address was given by Mrs. Harry Friedman, group president. Committee members present included Mrs. Sidney Poretsky, Mrs. Melvin Gelman, Mrs. Sidney Leibsen, Mrs. Paul Burman, Mrs. Nathaniel Hirson, Mrs. Marvin Kogod, Mrs. Sol Taetle, Mrs. Mike Grodsky, Mrs. Charles Howard and Mrs. Alvin Miller.

KNOX, the hatter, does this version of the cloche that was the rage of the '20's, and calls it "Hey Hey." Made of soft felt it claps close over one ear and has a dimpled crown. A spray of quills spring up from a grosgrain bow

"THE Charleston" is the name of this Knox felt casual with a flattering off-the-face brim and big, grosgain bow at one side. Both hats shown here are from the new fall collection at Raleigh Haberdasher

Eyes Wide With Fear, Flower Girl Sat Down Tearfully in Church Door, Blocking Wedding Processional; Father Now Worries About Her

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am 39 and my wife is 38. We have three children—a daughter nearly 9, another 4½, and a son just 2 years old. I am writing about the middle child, Elsa.

Recently Elsa was asked to be flower girl at the wedding of a younger sister of my wife's sister-in-law, in a small-town Protestant church 80 miles from our home. We didn't discuss it too much or in any way emphasize the event in advance; and two days before the wedding Elsa left with her uncle, aunt and small cousins (one of whom was to be ring bearer), so that the wedding party would have a chance to rehearse before the ceremony.

When my wife and I arrived the morning of the wedding, we were told that Elsa had refused to practice and that no pressure had been applied. We questioned her attitude in an offhand way and she said that she didn't need to practice, that she knew what to do; and after my wife had dressed her, she showed us that she did know.

Child's Mother Was Very Upset

HOWEVER, when the processional started and it was Elsa's turn to enter the church from the vestry, she sat down in the doorway, her eyes wide with fear, and started to cry. After a few seconds' persuasion I removed her from the floor so that the bride and her father could enter. Elsa shook with what I suppose was fear and continued to cry. My wife was terribly upset and hurt.

We had to coax a great deal to get her to join the wedding party for a picture, but she finally did do that; and that's about the story except for my question: Was her reaction normal, or was it a forerunner of some emotional disturbance that should be watched and corrected?

Elsa has never been a shy child, more to the contrary if anything, although my wife has many fears and did exactly the same thing when she was 6 years old. Although Elsa doesn't go to church every Sunday, she has been often enough that it isn't a novelty, But she has always gone to a Catholic church, however. What is your interpretation of her behavior, E. B.

Simple Instance of Unpreparedness

DEAR E. B.: It seems to me that Elsa's ignominious flop in the wedding processional was simply a matter of smarty-pants taking a tumble.

She was acting too big for her britches, as the saying goes, in refusing to rehearse—on the theory that she "knew" what to do and didn't need to practice,—and consequently when the time came to deliver, she flunked because she wasn't prepared to go through her paces automatically.

However, this hoity-toity assumption of hers and its dismal denouement may be rightfully charged to her parents' innocent error in treating her part in the forthcoming ceremony just too, too casually,—your intention being, of course, to put her at ease about her "leading" part in the big undertaking, so that she wouldn't get nervously apprehensive of failure in advance.

Your question indicates concern as to whether she may be neurotically inclined, fundamentally anxious or latently hysterical to an abnormal degree. In my opinion, her performance as described doesn't afford significant evidence for thinking so.

Discipline Helps Control Emotions

THE FACT that she set forth blithely (I gather) with her uncle and aunt and small cousins, taking leave of her parents for a couple of days (and a longish journey) without whimpering or clinging, suggests that she has normal security-feelings for a child her age,—and so also does her bland refusal to practice with the wedding party, simply because she didn't want to.

Further, the fact that her parents, on learning of her balkiness, only questioned the attitude by delicate indirection, suggests that Elsa is accustomed to much more approbation and tolerance than objective discipline from them in the rearing process,—and this, I believe, gets at the root of her distrait behavior described.

It occurs to me that your too-velvety training methods leave her too much at the mercy of stampeding emotions in big moments when you can't act for her. And need I remind, the essential good of schooling a child in obedience to reasonable authority is to assist the youngster in developing rational reflex-control of infantile fears.

Costume Ensemble Is Tops

PERHAPS the most useful, as well as one of the smartest fashions ever designed, is the costume ensemble. American women love it and buy it year after year.

This fall the costume dress ensemble ranks top among the new slim silhouette fashions. There are some with full skirts, but most women prefer to buy full skirted dresses and keep their ensembles slim.

The short soft little jackets are news. So are the high riding dress necklines—often caught at the side by a big diamond or rhinestone pin.

The fabrics are news, too—unfinished worsteds with a soft dull bloom. Colors? Black first, of course, then the smart new beiges and taupes, and for high drama—red!

Food Editors Are Told

'Mrs. '49' Is a New Woman In Kitchen and at Market

By Lucia Brown

CHICAGO, ILL., Sept. 27.—A composite picture of Mrs. 1949—who she is, the way she likes to cook and the kind of food news she likes to read—was given by speakers at opening sessions of the Newspaper Food Editors Conference here yesterday and today.

Here's how she looks:

She's younger than the prewar version of the average American housewife. Her children are younger, too, and her family is smaller.

She's got more money than the average housewife ever had before, but she lives in a more limited space. She has less house and less storage space for food.

She's better educated than her mother, but that doesn't mean she knows as much about cooking! And she hasn't the hired help mamma used to have.

How does she like to cook?

In a hurry. If she has small children, she has to cut kitchen time in order to get everything else done. If she works—and 30 percent of all American women over 14 now have jobs outside the home—she hasn't much time for cooking either.

Entertaining is likely to be informal and spur-of-the-moment, so she wants to know how to whip up tasty refreshments quickly. She entertains more often than her predecessors, but her parties are smaller.

Shops in Chain Stores

How does she do her marketing?

Strictly on her own, for the most part. The days of the kindly old grocer she consulted via telephone are about gone. Now she shops in a big supermarket, selects the food and carries it home herself, likes to be able to buy it all under one roof. She hardly ever speaks to a clerk. All the information she gets about the products is what's on the package.

What kind of food news does she like?

First, she asks simple cooking know-how—how to broil a steak or cook vegetables properly. That's the opinion of Home Economist Esther Latske, the "Marie Gifford" of Armour & Co.

She also appreciates recipes that fit her small family, Miss Latske told the editors. She'd rather have them designed to serve four persons than six.

She's Still in Town

Also adding to the picture of today's housewife, as presented to the editors, was Aunt Jemima herself, the great-great aunt of the ready mixes. American women are now buying almost 10 times as much cake mix as they did three years, it was revealed at the Aunt Jemima luncheon at Chicago's exclusive Casino Club.

"Aunt Jemima" appeared in her traditional bright bandana and apron. Her pancake mix, first of its kind is now well past its fiftieth birthday. It was introduced at the Columbia Exposition back in 1893. At this year's Food Editor's conference, "Jemima" demonstrated her two new "complete" cake mixes. Only water, plus a little beating and baking, is needed to make a cake.

By Ida Jean Kain

NO PART of the figure is so baffling to the teen-age girl as the bosom. Some girls slump, rounding their shoulders forward in an effort to minimize size. Others resort to binding brassieres. The girls with the out-of-fashion "boyish form" feel slighted. And all girls who think they have a bosom problem seem to be fascinated by the promise of special lotions, creams and magic means to bosom beauty. Suffice to say that science debunks "magic" methods.

IDA JEAN KAIN

But what can be done to correct or normalize this measurement? First of all, it is important to know that fashion to the contrary, there can be no arbitrary standard for this part of the figure, for feminine curves vary. Normally the breasts may be small and pointed, or broad and flat, or well-developed and large.

Secondly, stop considering the bust as an isolated problem, and view it in relation to your general health and weight. With normal weight, correct posture, firm muscle tissue and good health generally, you have no bosom problem!

Now to answer the question—will diet help to reduce the overly large bust? Yes. While normal size depends primarily on glands and is influenced by structure, nevertheless the overly large bust is almost always caused by an excess of fatty tissue and responds quickly to a loss in weight. But the diet must be adequate to protect vitality.

Adequate nutrition is also essential for you girls who are underdeveloped. Build up your vitality with more milk and eggs, vegetables, lean meats and whole grains. It's not just fat you want, but higher vitality and a better functioning system. That calls for improved nutrition and posture, and better health habits generally.

Sagging of the bust contour may be caused by excess weight, or it may be due to lack of tone in the skin and supporting muscles. Exercise is the answer. The role of exercise is better understood if you think of the breasts as being attached to and supported by powerful muscles which spread fan-shaped across each side of the chest. Since these muscles are attached to the upper arm, arm exercises which bring the chest muscles into action are all to the good. Exercise helps the underdeveloped girl to a better figure by expanding the chest and straightening the shoulders. But exercise cannot grow fat, so overweights need not hesitate to take toning calisthenics.

If the bust is large and heavy, wear a bra for all active exercise and sports. Be sure to have the bra fitted properly. Do not buy according to chest measurements, but according to cup size, and always have the support come from under the breast. Never wear a binding bra, for this breaks down the supporting tissues.

About Removing Lacquer From Brass

I have some brass fireplace equipment which was lacquered on one occasion. The lacquer has chipped off in places. I have used a good brass polish and lots of elbow grease to endeavor to remove all the lacquer, without success. Could you recommend some safe method of removing this lacquer without injuring the brass? I would also be interested to learn if I could relacquer this brass at home or does brass look prettier with routine polishings? Is it advisable to treat a brass door knocker in any way?

H. K.

The lacquer can be removed from the brass by wiping it with alcohol.

Whether you lacquer your decorative pieces to prevent tarnish or keep them clean by frequent polishing is a matter of your individual preference. When lacquered, metal has a higher shine than when polished with no lacquer used. Some persons very much like the high shine—others prefer the soft gleam of well-polished brass. Another factor which must be considered in deciding whether to lacquer or not is how much time and energy you have for repeated polishings.

If you decide to lacquer the pieces, polish them and then wipe with varsol to remove every trace of oil. Since even oil from the hands can cause trouble, it is advisable to work with gloves on. When clean, go over with a clear brushing lacquer. If you wish to apply a protective finish to the door knocker, I would suggest using a high grade spar varnish on it rather than the lacquer. Spar varnish is more resistant to weather.

We recently purchased a new, small brick bungalow located in Maryland. It has no basement, but has a three-foot crawl space beneath the hardwood flood. Can you tell me, please, if any special treatment is required to keep the space dry and free of insects, especially termites if they are a problem in this area? C. S. K.

To get necessary moisture most varieties of termites maintain a constant contact with the ground. This is done by attacking wood which is adjacent to soil such as in a foundation or by very ingeniously building clay tunnels along foundations from soil to wood. Because termites are a problem here and they build tunnels for distances as great as three feet, you are wise to investigate this possibility while your house is new.

To protect against the formation of tunnels it is possible to use a chemical to poison soil around foundations leading to wood. This work can be done for you by one of the firms, listed under "exterminators" in the yellow pages of the telephone book, which specialize in termite control. They will make a free inspection to determine what preventive measures need to be taken and, if you wish it, place the poison where it should be placed. The poison will continue effective five years.

The sort of drainage you have around the house will determine how dry the crawl space under the house remains. If the house is situated on high ground, with the grade dropping away from it on all sides, there should be no trouble whatever from moisture. If, however, you are on the side of a hill or a low spot where moisture from snow and rain could run under the house, you should grade the soil or place drains in such a way as to deflect the water.

You are not apt to have any trouble from other insects, rats, or mice in the crawl space unless during the building process food scraps were dropped there. These could attract rodents and even roaches and should be removed. Mice and rats have been known to form a network of tunnels in crawl spaces, but only if they have some constant source of food.

Shareholders Vote Combine Of Pepco, Unit

By S. Oliver Goodman

Merger of Braddock Light & Power Co. into its parent firm, Potomac Electric Power Co., was approved yesterday at special meetings of stockholders of both firms.

Braddock, chartered 40 years ago as a Pepco wholly-owned subsidiary to operate in nearby Virginia, will formally lose its identity on December 27. The step is necessary, it was explained, to put Pepco in a better position to issue bonds against Braddock properties.

The consolidation also will help to simplify Pepco's corporate structure, President Alfred G. Neal said.

Sixty-two percent of Pepco's outstanding 3,778,500 preferred and common shares was represented at yesterday's meeting, either in person or proxy. Of the 2,330,534 shares represented, 2,329,060 shares were voted for the merger.

Necessary approval of the merger already has been given by Federal, State and local regulatory agencies. Braddock serves the Pentagon and about 2000 other customers in Arlington, Va. Pepco expects to add about 11 million dollars more to Braddock facilities within the next three years.

"GAINS HUNDREDS OF HOURS FOR ME... THOUSANDS OF DOLLARS FOR MY BOSS!"

Gray AUDOGRAPH by Edison SOUNDWRITER

A wonderful change has taken place in our office since the day we did away with old-fashioned, time consuming shorthand and adopted AUDOGRAPH Soundwriting. Instead of spending a third of my time at the Boss' desk, notebook in hand, "taking dictation", I save hours in which to render far more valuable assistance . . . junior executive assistance . . . while the Boss dictates to his Audograph.

But that's only one of the many wonderful things the Audograph does for us! In addition to taking dictation, instructions and reports, it records both ends of the Boss' important telephone conversations, takes down every word at meetings and conferences and saves half the time and manpower in taking inventories. And because the Audograph is so light and compact, the Boss often takes it with him on business trips . . . uses it on trains, planes and even in his car . . . and mails the unbreakable plastic disc records to me for transcription.
Why not find out what the saving power of AUDOGRAPH'S exclusive combination of benefits and advantages can do in your business.

Chicago Grain

Chicago, Sept. 27 (AP).—All deliveries of wheat except July reached new seasonal highs at the Board of Trade today. New flour business was the dominating factor in the advance, which crept up to around 2 cents after a slow start.

Buying was attributed to commercial interests. A fair amount of business was by bakery flour buyers, with additional business anticipated on a 10-cent advance in family flour prices effective tomorrow.

At the close wheat was 1¼ to 2⅛ higher; corn was ¼ to 1⅜ higher; oats were ⅜ to 2 cents higher; rye was 2 to 2½ higher; soybeans were 1⅛ to 3 cents higher, and lard lagged closing 2 to 8 cents lower.

On the Town

By Georganne Williamson

SANDE WILLIAMS' BAND opened the fall season at the Shoreham Palladium Room last Friday with nary a hair out of place, although he didn't have a pianist for the five-piece outfit till that very day.

Williams

Early last Wednesday morning Sande Williams and pianist-arranger Pat Dixon were in an automobile accident near Baltimore. Williams was just shaken up, but Pat was hopitalized with a broken jaw.

Williams' unvarying style, which doesn't depend on special effects or instrumental solos, made it easier to fill in, and the band went on with a pianist imported from New York.

Their easygoing style is mighty like that of the Stork Club, where they filled a six-month engagement last year. It seems a trifle colorless from the table, but on the floor it's so easy to dance to.

"We suit the tempo to the dancers on the floor," Williams says. "And usually they want the Sherman Billingsly Bounce. Williams has done a lot with the Bounce. He's picked up a lot of well-known Stork Club numbers. "It's Just One of Those Things," and "You Hit the Spot" are typical. And arranged strictly for the homefolks.

As a variation, his Latin music has plenty of verve and dash; he's planning to dish that out about a third of the time. And the 5-7 cocktail time will cater to younger people with more dreamy numbers, spiced with some jazz. An innovation is Embassy Day. Once a week a country is picked, a native singer is recommended by its embassy, and that country's songs are featured by Sande Williams.

NICK GASTON at the Old New Orleans seems to have set a precedent last year. He brought Jody Miller to his club to perform just after the Miss America contest ended. Now Mary Jane Hayes, Miss Washington of 1949 and an excellent pianist, is booked for a two-week engagement starting the 30th. It will mark the social opening of O. N. O.'s fall program. Miss Hayes tried out the piano at a recent semifinal of the Mardi Gras beauty contest and found the guests encouragingly responsive.

The Mardi Gras contest is unique for a Washington night club. Miss Philadelphia, Miss Maryland and Frankie Lane were on hand last Wednesday to help pick the winners. The Lindsey twins, Loraine De Boe and Linda Harper are out in front as New Orleans-bound beauties so far.

The Family Scrapbook

By Dr. Ernest G. Osborne

Some Children Are Awkward

When we stop to think of it, we all know that children differ from one another in many ways. One common difference is in amount of physical coordination.

Even in the same family, one youngster may move with assurance and skill, rarely drop anything, and almost never stumble or bump into objects. His brother or sister, on the other hand, is as awkward as he can be.

Unfortunately, too many of us parents find it hard to be sympathetic with the awkward child. The trouble he causes upsets us and before we know it we are nagging him as though he were personally responsible for his bumbling, fumbling ways. This approach, making him more self-conscious, only accentuates the awkwardness.

Though it's hard, it's important that we discipline ourselves into keeping constantly in mind that awkwardness is not a moral issue and that in almost every instance, it is caused by actual physical conditions.

Sometimes, the child "outgrows" awkwardness as he grows older. Sometimes, it carries right on into adult years. Most of us would not blame and nag a child for having been born with a withered arm. In a very real sense, awkwardness is in the same class.

TRY IT

SKETCH A MAP OF YOUR VACATION TRAVELS

Now that most of us have returned from summer vacation travels and are buckling down to our winter work, we have only the memories of our trips. One way of keeping these memories bright and clear is to sketch an outline map of the United States and the major cities and spots visited on your journey.

Each trip from start to finish should be drawn in one color outlining your route from place to place. The amount of detail that may be included depends on the map you draw. It is best to draw your permanent map after you have sketched your ideas on scratch paper. Use a good heavy quality paper for your final one so that it can be hung as a wall map.

Your map may be kept from year to year and new journeys added. If you want to keep it indefinitely, your drawing will keep much cleaner if framed under glass. Go tripping along through the years with your map!

What's the Verdict?

PRIVILEGE

Q. In a lawsuit over an alleged debt, the plaintiff offers to prove existence of the debt by calling the former attorney of the defendant. The former attorney would testify that part of the alleged debt consisted of the plaintiff financing litigation for the defendant, and that the arrangements were made in the attorney's office, with him as the negotiator. The defendant objects to this evidence as violating the attorney - client relationship. Should the evidence be excluded?

A confidential communication between attorney and client are privileged, meaning that the attorney may not disclose them without permission of the client. This is to give the attorney full opportunity to learn all his client's problems without jeopardy. But the communication must be confidential, and the presence of a third party (other than a secretary or other agent of the attorney or client) means that it is not confidential. Since the plaintiff was present during this transaction, the communication was not confidential, and, therefore, the attorney's evidence is admissible. —F. L. D.

Cases discussed illustrate general principles. They should not be construed as legal advice in particular cases. Take your legal problems to your lawyer.

Too Late for Help

Some people seek the prudent views . . . Of experts or of friends . . . Before they start the struggle to . . . Achieve their special ends . . . But others make decisions first . . . And then they want advice . . . And then they also wonder why . . . They have to pay the price . . . In eager haste they close a deal . . . And sign the dotted line . . . And they are mighty confident . . . And they are feeling fine . . . Until they look around and ask . . . And learn to their dismay . . . How little they acquired and . . . How much they gave away . . . When just a bit of patience and . . . A word from someone wise . . . Could easily have helped them out . . . And opened up their eyes.

THE DISTRICT LINE by Bill Gold

"Amateur Hour" Gets Low Hooper Rating

Clara Cassidy of 1816 Belmont rd. nw. says that there's something worse than listening to Transit Radio.

"It's listening to a fellow passenger who hums along with the music—off key."

TAKE YOUR CHOICE

Washington's British colony got a chuckle out of the front-page headlines in two London newspapers last Monday.

The Daily Express bannered: "Britain to Make Bomb." In the Daily Mail, the top headline read: "No A-Bombs for Britain."

GIVE-AWAYS

"Three 8-week-old female kittens with exceptionally pretty faces; in excellent physical condition." (Republic 7500, extension 2829, during day: Adams 4362 evenings.)

"Two beautiful tiger-striped gray kittens, 8 weeks old." (Alexandria 1548.)

PET PEEVE

Marjorie Martin of 3500 Macomb st. nw. wishes something unpleasant would happen to motorists who speed past loading platforms in wet weather, spattering the folks standing there with dirty rainwater.

BITING CRITICISM

Mrs. J. H. Gordon, jr., of 11210 Valley View ave., Kensington, Md., wants to know why news stories sometimes seem to end too abruptly.

The explanation is really very simple.

The most important facts in a newspaper story are listed first; lesser details come later, in descending order of importance.

This permits the makeup editor to "bite off" the last and least important lines of an item that's too long for the available space.

There's an art to "biting in" stories, especially when the job must be done in a matter of seconds.

And inevitably there are occasional slip-ups, especially when the makeup man is smack up against a deadline for a press start.

But, to make sure that your paper is produced and delivered on schedule, he lets the edition "get away" on time, and makes corrections later on.

The alternative is to wait until the edition is letter-perfect—which would mean you'd get today's paper tomorrow. Maybe.

PERSONAL NOTES

Bill Drach, 2040 N. Vermont st., Arlington, Va.: Maybe they put the sign up because they're tired of answering the same question over and over again. The home is not built of steel, as one might expect.

Capt. Harry W. Ross, 616 Longfellow st. nw.: Coak says the reason he didn't draw the pipe in an ashtray (as the item had it) was to see how many readers would be alert enough to complain. Score to date: one.

THOSE COURTESY TICKETS

As much as I've written about courtesy tickets, there's still great doubt in my mind that the police have a uniform policy regarding them.

Some readers whose cars bear District tags report that they got courtesy tickets for minor violations and were pleasantly surprised that the police were so lenient with them.

Yet many folks who drive with out-of-State tags tell me that the only tickets they've ever been given are the type that cost three bucks at the nearest precinct station.

However, I can't say that I blame the police for declining to give these drivers out-of-State courtesy, inasmuch as many of them live here for years without ever buying District tags—usually for political reasons having to do with "domicile."

But what I want to know is: How can the cops tell the residents and the bona fide visitors apart?

ADD DEFINITIONS

Mrs. R. H. Adams of 101 Fairhaven ave., Alexandria, Va., is a kindred spirit. She likes our "Add Definitions" department, and wishes we'd use more of them—even if some of them aren't entirely original. Like these:

American: A fellow who complains that the Government ought to balance its budget—then borrows $5 until payday.

Committee: A body that keeps minutes and wastes hours.

Ida Jean Kain: Eat, drink and be merry, for tomorrow we diet.

Orator: The patriot who is always ready to lay down your life for his country.

I'm a sucker for these quips, too—but I hate to use them without proper credit. If you send in any that are clever enough to be worth repeating, please try to identify the author whenever possible.

Some, of course, are by that clever fellow Anon. Like:

FEPC Fight Simmers in Secret

By Drew Pearson

For three years, a running filibuster has been going on to keep the fair employment practices bill from coming up on the Senate floor. But after 2000 pages of testimony, the weary talkathon was temporarily ended — without fanfare — when the bill was discharged by the Senate Labor Committee.

Senator Donnell

This is the most controversial of all the civil rights legislation and is certain to touch off another filibuster when it reaches the floor. All that is holding it up now is the Democratic high command—still undecided whether to bring up civil rights at the tail end of this session while the Senators are too tired to talk and in a mood to go home, or to save civil rights until the 1950 election year when it will be more potent politically.

The last words of the three-year filibuster against the fair employment practices bill were said behind closed doors. Starting off the man who blocked the bill at the previous session, Senator Forrest Donnell, sputtered: "Drew Pearson in his newspaper column gave me undue credit for delaying this bill!"

What had happened was that Donnell, though not a Southern Democrat but a Missouri Republican, had blocked the bill on a technicality. Though this also had taken place behind closed doors, it was reported afterward in this column. Not pleased at being exposed, Donnell went on angrily: "I think this committee knows I am not one to bicker over technicalities!"

Hoot of Delight

This brought a hoot of delight from the other Senators, since Donnell has debated an hour over placement of a comma.

Red-faced, Donnell explained he had held up the bill only at the request of Alabama's Senator Lister Hill, who had been called over to the White House. Yet, no sooner had Donnell disclaimed responsibility for blocking the bill than he turned around and called for more hearings—which would have prolonged the filibuster indefinitely.

Minnesota's hair-trigger Senator Hubert Humphrey leaped to his feet.

"How many more hearings do you think we need?" he snorted. "We have already heard from 250 witnesses who have filled 2000 pages of testimony."

In a vote on Donnell's proposal for more hearings, four other Senators sided with him—Taft of Ohio, Pepper of Florida, Hill of Alabama and Withers of Kentucky. Three Senators sided with Humphrey—and for FEPC—Thomas of Utah, Neely of West Virginia, and Murray of Montana. But Chairman Thomas pulled two proxies out of the bag for Morse of Oregon and Douglas of Illinois—for FEPC. This gave Humphrey and Thomas a 1-vote majority—for a moment at least.

Then Donnell triumphantly pulled out a letter from Smith of New Jersey, authorizing Donnell to vote for him and trusting to Donnell's "infinite wisdom." Donnell raised a question, however, on how the proxy should be applied.

"Don't forget that you are empowered with 'infinite wisdom,'" chided Hill. "You can't make a mistake."

Finally it was agreed by an 11-to-1 vote to discharge the bill without a recommendation either for or against it. The lone dissenter, in this case, was not Donnell—but Hill of Alabama.

Germ Warfare

Despite the unpleasant news about Russia's A-bomb, those who plan U. S. war strategy had long ago figured on a Russian weapon probably even more gruesome—namely, germ warfare.

Bacteriological warfare preparation is now no secret either in the United States or Russia. By the end of the war the United States Navy had developed a germ capable of wiping out the entire Japanese rice crop. The germ, of course, was never used. But since then American scientists have continued their experimentation, while Soviet scientists are reported to have been working feverishly and to have developed two types of virus. One would wipe out cattle, the other would spread pestilence among human beings.

U. S. Intelligence regarding developments behind the Iron Curtain is now much better than at the end of the war. It's even known that the Russians are working on inoculation for their own troops so they could advance into enemy territory immune to disease germs after their own bacteriological warfare units had knocked out the enemy.

For some time this was to be Russia's chief answer to the atomic bomb, for germ warfare can be prepared in small, inexpensive laboratories instead of the acres and acres of industrial plants necessary for A-bomb construction.
